Dear Miss Waters

ATTRACTIVE WOMEN TRY TO WIN AFFECTION OF BIG BUSINESS ROMEO

I am very much in love with this man. He tells me that he loves me and wants to marry, me and I think he does. But he is a very busy man and his business brings him with many attractive women, and all of them try to win his attention. Because of this I am afraid to let him see how much I love him. I am afraid that if I do he will take too much for granted. I really love him. Could it be jealousy or what? Please advise me what to do. G. W. T.—

A complete answer to this question cannot be given because of the details left out. However, generally speaking, professional and business men whose work bring them into contact with attractive women, are no more to be doubted than any other type or species of men. As for the attractive women, this is perhaps an illusion on your part. Smiles are often times and most of the time nothing more than charm and courtesy. As for the sincerity of his love toward you, study the man, piece together his opinions, views, and past experiences. If his record is fairly clean there should not be much cause for doubting.

Dear Miss Waters:
I am 21 and have a sister 16. I am going with a man with whom I am very much in love. He is 26. Until lately everything was going nicely. Now my sister seems very much interested in by boy friend, and although she is much younger than he is, he seems interested in her. He seems very nice to me still, but he seems to be falling in love with her. My sister is not really in love with him, she just leads him on. She is my sister and I can't keep him is she wants him. Tell me please what I should do. —S. M. F.

At her immature age, your sister certainly should not be interested in a man 10 years her senior, not even to the extent of leading him on. As for this young man who would play double, forget him, he is not worthy of your love.
When your sister sees that you are no longer interested in this person, she will also lose interest. The breaking up of this affair will leave the way clear for you to give your sister the advise which she needs, but which you could not give while both of you are liking this man.
