OMAHA UNIVERSITY GRADUATE MASTERS DEGREE IN EDUCATION; MAKES SUCCESS IN HER HOME TOWN

Miss Willett Embry, supervisor of the Mathematics department of the Richmond Kentucky, High School, and her efficient co-workers, Miss Josephine Haynes and Cabell Merritt, teach the mathematics classes from the seventh grade through the eleventh. Miss Embry has two classes (one the boys, and the other girls) in the seventh grade, one in the eighth grade, a freshman Algebra class (girls) and a geometry class. Mathematics fundamental furnishes three fundamental principles necessary for one's success regardless of the type of work or the field in which he is employed. These principles are skill, reasoning, and accuracy.

Miss Embry attended Omaha U. in 1937 and received her Masters Degree in Education. She is the niece of Mrs. Hiram R. Greenfield of Omaha with whom she made her home during her stay in Omaha.

WELL, WELL, HOME AGAIN After a sojourn along the Pacific coast, which lasted three and half months, Mrs. William Triplett of 2711 Wirt St., returned home last Sunday morning. She reported having a wonderful trip.

City Union of the Ushers and Usherettes

Jack Hall, reporter

Last Sunday being the fourth Sunday most of the churches in the city were holding their "month-end" services, was one reason for the small attendance of our Pew Rally; however, the president stated she was very pleased with the outcome of the meeting from a financial view. That, being our first step toward raising money to send a delegate to the Usher's National Convention to be held in Brooklyn, N. Y. during the month of July.

Mr. Robert (Bud) Grene, of Zion's Local, presented a penny "punch card" to the Union and

THE CROSS OVER KILLING

BY JULES A. SANDY, Omaha Guide Writer

Joan Clark's apartment gave out an air of cheerful expectancy. Delicious orders of cooking food filled the air, and in the attractive living room with its chintz curtains and chair covers a small table was set for two. Robert Hilcrest, seated in an easy chair, puffed contentedly on his pipe as he read the evening paper. His eyes wandered every now and then to the door where Joan threw remarks to him as she prepared the luncheon which he was soon to enjoy.

Suddenly she called to him again. "Oh, Bob, I'll be right out. Everything is ready. I'm sorry to have kept you waiting so long, but I almost had a catastrophe. I forgot the baking powder in my bread until the very last minute. With the last word she burst into the room carrying various steaming dishes. Bob leaped to his feet and took some of the dishes from her. He looked at her lovingly and answered

"Seeing that it's you I'm waiting for, I don't mind at all. The anticipation of seeing you is enough to make me forget the wait."

"Now, Bob, don't tell me that all over again, because if you do no one can possibly get along with me."

"Why, dear?"

"Because, I'll be so puffed up." "Nonsense, you puffed up? That is a laugh. Nothing could ever puff you up."

"Oh yeah, you're likely to wake up some bright morning and find me just like that. No one could stand up under your flattery. But let's eat or everything will be cold."

They set the things on the table and Bob held the chair for Joan, then sat down himself. For a time there was silence, than Joan looked up from her plate and said seriously,

"Bob, I'm worried." "What about, Joan?"

"About Johnny and Joe. They're hanging around Bo Edwards and his gang entirely too much."

"Yes, Joan. I'm worried about that too. I've tried to talk sense into that kid brother of mine's head. But he's headstrong and insists that he knows what he is doing. That gang is too dangerous to fool around with. I know Edwards personally and he's dangerous when he wants to be." He leaned forward confidentially. "Do you know, Jane, I think there's more to this gambling joint business than meets the eye."

"Bob, I wish you'd persuade Joe to stay away from that awful place. He's all I've got and—"

"You're forgetting me, Joan."

She looked up with a quick smile. "And you of course. But Joe and Johnny are so young to be mixed up in this kind of thing. Bob isn't there anything we can do?"

in turn explained how easy they can raise money by that system. Most of the presidents of the different Locals took one to present to their respective groups. They thought it would at least be worth a try as "raising money" seems to be the chief object.

The guest speaker was Mrs. J. D. Lewis, and I am sure everyone who heard her especially the Ushers and Usherettes, witnessed an address that will long be remembered by them and hope to have her come again in the future.

Just here we wish to thank the pastors who favored us with their presence and short, but "spicy" remarks. We again say they are all ways glad to have them drop in to share our service any time.

The "Door Keeper," our monthly magazine, is out for this month and if you haven't received yours see your local president or Mrs. Young, the president of the Union. Lots of news for you.

The reporter, last Sunday, while making his weekly morning service "visits," was glad to see some of the ushers out again and back on the job, having been absent due to illness.

Speaking of the combined song services that were held at St. John last Sunday night—it was very well attended, you will remember during the winter the Methodists as well as most of the other churches, enacted the, "You Come and worship with us this Sunday, and we will come to you next Sunday" system, which helped on the coal "bin." So since Spring is here, now they are resuming services at their respective churches.

We wish to thank the Ushers who came and rendered their services so graciously to help St. John Local last Sunday evening.

The residence of the next cabinet meeting will be announced in next week's issue. I'll B—C—ing—U.

GREENSBORO DOCTOR HAS PRACTICED SUCCESSFULLY FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Greensboro, N. C. March 30 (By E. L. Hercules, Calvin Service)—Dr. C. C. Stewart, a native of Darlington, Westmoreland, Jamaica, B.W.I., has made an enviable record during the past twenty-five years in which he has been a practicing physician and surgeon here. A graduate of Howard University, Washington, D. C., from which he finished with high honors, he then entered the Howard Medical school and finished at the head of his class, besides receiving many prizes for high scholarship. He served his internship at Freedman's Hospital, and later did some special study under Dr. Curtis and Dr. Carson, two leading surgeons of the national Capital.

From the time that Dr. Stewart started his practice here until the present, he has rendered yeoman service to the community. Although he has been practicing for a quarter of a century Dr. Stewart always keeps abreast of the times by visiting the various leading clinics in all parts of the country. He may be considered a pioneer in Negro hospital work in North Carolina. He had much to do with the founding of the L. Richardson Memorial Hospital, which is one of America's foremost hospitals
