LIBERIANS AIM TO HAVE A PURELY AFRICAN STATE, PRESIDENT EDWIN BROWN TELLS CORRESPONDENTS

Monrovia, Liberia—The success of President's Edwin Barclay's three-year plan was acclaimed during the celebration of Liberia's ninety-second anniversary as a sovereign state. Liberia was colonized in 1822 by free Negroes and freed slaves from the United States. Imposing independence day ceremonies were held at the executive mansion, attended by representatives of foreign nations cabinet officers and other government officials. President Barclay, Secretary of State C. L. Simpson and Hon. Lester A. Walton, American Minister were the principal speakers.

On behalf of the Diplomatic Corps of Monrovia of which he is dean, Minister Walton said:

"It gives me great pleasure to offer congratulations on the 92nd anniversary of the republic's independence, July 26 is always a gala occasion. This year affords a rare opportunity to celebrate jointly two important historic events. In retrospect, the people are in a festive mood in commemoration of the establishment of Liberian sovereignty and autonomy in 1847. From a contemporary perspective, hearts and minds are made glad in the knowledge that your three-year plan is of successful fruition.

"In January, 1936, when you were inaugurated Chief Executive for another term, you launched an ambitious, comprehensive program for the economic and political rehabilitation of the republic. The eyes of the world were on Liberia. It was a monumental and problematic task you undertook; so much so that at home and abroad there were those skeptical as to the probability of accomplishment.

"Under your able and far-sighted leadership the three year plan has been an unquestioned success. Today, Liberia enjoys a reputation for political stability. It has won the confidence and respect of nations. At no time has it bulked so important in international affairs. The sound condition of the republic's finances is attested by the fact that for three successive years the budget has balanced and, so fundamental to the development of the country's economy, has been prosecuted with vigor within the limits of resources. The educational system has been standardized. These are few of the major objectives attained. Time will not permit additional enumeration.

"I deem it fitting to observe that had the Barclay plan been a failure the news would have been publicized far and wide. With alacrity, detractors would have gladly embraced the opportunity to substantiate in print and by word the many false statements and malicious misrepresentations which have been circulated to discredit the only republic in Africa, and to prove that Liberians are not fit to govern. It, therefore, is hoped that due credit will be given for what, in my opinion, will some day rank in the annals of internal and international relationships as a national achievement of no minor significance.

"On behalf of the Diplomatic Corps I propose a toast to the health of the President of the Republic of Liberia.

In response to congratulatory remarks, President Barclay told foreign representatives that it was the aim of Liberians to have a purely African State. He said:

"We fully realize how severely critical are observers of the Liberian scene. But they should realize what it would appear, they do not understand, that the aim of Liberians is not to build up in Africa a pseudo-European state. Their objective is a state purely African preserving what is best in the tradition of the race yet not uninfluenced by those ideals of justice, human liberty, and social responsibility which have gradually developed by man everywhere in the course of his cultural and social evolution.

In so far as we have succeeded in attaining in a measurable degree the realization of those objectives, we claim the sympathetic consideration of others and their cooperation in our future progressive march."

"There is no such thing as perfection in government. There are always faults to be corrected, evils to be avoided, and new remedies to be worked out."

United States Senator Pat Harrison.

SPECIAL TO THE OMAHA GUIDE

From Federal Works Agency United States Housing Authority

Washington, D. C.—With all of its 172 dwelling units now ready for occupancy, the Willert Park Project in Buffalo, New York is among the first of the low-rent housing projects, aided by the United States Housing Authority to reach this state of development.

Built by the Buffalo Municipal Housing Authority with the financial assistance of the USHA the new $913,000 project replaces one of the worst slum areas in the city. In design and structure, Willert Park is rated one of the most attractive of the USHA Aid-4 Projects. Adjacent to an extensive recreational area with a swimming pool and ample play space, the project is ideally located. Sanitary conveniences and cross-ventilation are provided in each dwelling.

Monthly shelter rents in the project average $12.91 per dwelling unit. The average annual income of families to be rehoused will amount to about $750 and in some instances will be as low as $500. Families with such incomes who live in substandard dwellings are eligible for admission to the new project.

The first families began moving into the project during the last week of June prior to the completion of all the units. At the same time low income families began moving into newly opened projects in Austin, Texas; Jacksonville, Florida; and New York City.

Under supervision of the Buffalo Municipal Housing Authority the project is staffed by Negro workers with Alfred D. Price, a Buffalo social worker, as manager.

HOME TO YOU

A recent bulletin of the National Board of Fire Underwriters deals with the immensely important subject of "Fire Equipment in the Home"—and that is something that comes straight home to everyone.

Adequate home fire-fighting equipment simple and cheap—in fact, you probably have most of what you need on hand now. Many a potentially destructive fire has been quickly extinguished with a garden hose. Short pieces of hose kept inside the house near faucets may come in mighty handy. And that simplest of all protective devices, a pail of water, may be a lifesaver in an emergency.

Water is obviously the agent to use for most fires—but it should not be forgotten that in some cases, water will spread, not quench a fire. In the instance of kitchen fires involving grease, for instance, the application of water is likely to result in a sudden burst of flame that will send the fire to all corners of the room. A fire of this kind should be fought by covering the burning receptacle in order to shut off the air supply, after turning off all heat.

Closet fires can often be smothered by simply closing the door. In any event, no matter where the fire is, close all doors that will tend to confine it.

Every householder will do well to buy one or two home extinguishers of an effective and inexpensive type, of which there are many approved makes on the market. Foam and gas extinguishers are the most efficient agents for quenching oil fires.

Lastly the National Board's Bulletin offers a number of suggestions for home fire fighting, which should be kept in mind: 1. Never attempt to fight fire in a smoke-filled room or basement—poisonous fumes may overcome you. 2. Never enter a room where much fire is in evidence. 3. Women should not attempt to fight fire, wearing cotton or silk dresses—a human life is worth more than property. 4. See that everyone is out of danger before you fight the fire. 5. Money spent for fire prevention, such as approved electrical appliances, repairs to chimneys and heating plants, fire stops, etc., is more worth while than that spent for extinguishing equipment.
