"To the Negroes in the Northern part of the United States, I speak as a proven friend. You, who are the poorest paid of all the workers of the land, you who suffer the greatest handicap of any race by reason of your low income should cast your votes for Wendell L. Willkie, who promises and I believe his promises, to create jobs in which the Negroes of the country will share fully with all other workers."

LARGEST ENROLLMENT IN HISTORY AT SOCIAL SCHOOL.

With 110 students, 107 of whom are full time, enrolled at the present time, the Atlanta University School of Social Work not only enjoys the largest enrollment in the history of the institution, but has become one of the ten largest schools of social work in the world irrespective of race. It is also the largest professional school of any kind among Negroes. While it is the only school of its kind devoting itself solely to the training of young Negro men and women for the profession of social work and offering the full two-year graduate course leading to the degree of Master of Social Work, it draws its students from non-racial as well as racial institutions scattered over a wide area.

Forty-seven American colleges and universities, representing a widely scattered area, have alumni who have entered the School of Social work. Some of the outstanding institutions from which these young people received their liberal arts training are: New York University and Hunter College of New York City; University of Illinois at Urbana, Illinois; Temple University of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; University of Colorado; Boulder, Colorado; Fordham University New York City; University of Wichita, Wichita, Kansas; University of Toledo, Toledo, Ohio; Indiana State Teachers College, Bloomington, Indiana; Boston University, Boston, Massachusetts; Maharani College, India; Prairie View State College; Wilberforce University; Howard University, Virginia State College, Kentucky State College, West Virginia State College, Tennessee State College, Fisk University, Dillard University, Morgan State College and Princess Anne College of Maryland; Hampton Institute, Tuskegee Institute, Talladega College, Wiley College, Louisville Municipal College, Knoxville College, Virginia Union, No. Carolina College for Negroes, So. Carolina A&M, Bennett College, Lincoln University and many others. The local Atlanta colleges, Morehouse, Spelman, Morris Brown, Clark and Atlanta University are well represented with from three to seven alumni registered from each of the colleges.

From 26 states, the District of Columbia and India, according to Director Forrester B. Washington have come these young people who have congregated in Atlanta some times called the "Athens of the South", in order to secure graduate training for the field of their chosen vocation. One of the striking phenomena is the enrollment of thirty men, which is attributed not only to the increased interest in social work on the part of Negro men, but also the success of the school in placing its male as well as its female graduates in good paying jobs. Included in the enrollment are not only students who have their bachelor's degree but those who have already obtained their master's degree and who are now working for the Master of Social Work degree. In addition there are several students who have studied at other schools of social work.
