

YOU'LL HAVE TO DO WITHOUT

-A GREAT MANY THINGS

"The Negro people will find there are a great many goods which they will have to do without as the National Defense program gains in momentum."

These were the words, of Miss Frances H. Williams, Special Groups Consultant, Consumer Division, Office of Price Administration. She referred to recent curtailments in the production of consumer goods brought about as a result of priorities and allocations for defense purposes imposed by OPM and OPA.

Miss Williams saw the recent buying wave in silk hosiery and its subsequent rationing by some stores as just the beginning of curtailments of numerous important civilian goods. "There is hardly a thing you buy that won't be affected by the National Defense program in one way or another" she said.

"The Consumer Division," she said, "will protect the consumer in every way possible." She announced that it is likely that simplification programs will be drawn up for a great many lines of consumer goods. Such programs cut down the number of colors, styles or varieties of the article with the result that a great volume of goods can be produced with present machinery.

The Negro consumer advisor listed as materials already known to be scarce such metals as aluminum, zinc, copper, nickel, and some types of steel. A list of day to day goods made from these would include automobiles, washing machines, irons, electric fans, refrigerators, toasters, roasters, percolators, aluminum pots and pans, roller skates, bicycles, metal furniture, stainless steel knives, zinc tops for canning jars, and vacuum cleaners.

Other materials listed that are becoming harder to get because they have to be bought from far places in the world and because there is a shortage of shipping space include: rubber imported oils, cork, spices, linen, mother of pearl, oil and chemicals for tanning shoes, and perfumes or perfume ingredients. However, there seems to be ample supply of such consumer goods made from these materials as automobile tires, sneakers, balls paint and varnishes, soap, tapioca, highly glossed paper, linoleum, black and white pepper, vanilla, sage, bone buttons, gelatine, pearl buttons, linen handkerchiefs, tea towels, and fishing lines.

Still another list of consumer goods which may experience a shrinkage in supply because of the defense and lend-lease programs includes wool blankets, some kinds of cotton cloth, cotton and rayon upholstery, pork, dairy products, eggs and some canned goods, especially canned fish and canned tomatoes.

If Alexander Hamilton, "that bright consummate flower" of the early years of the United States, were living in Nebraska now, he would be called a Negro, unless that term would have been dropped by reason of his ability and accomplishments.

The price of beauty is constant vigilance! Few women are beautiful in the artistic sense, but many a "plain Jane" creates for herself the illusion of beauty, which is quite as good, and within reach of every woman willing to work for it.
