 The greatest star of the screen!

"Salute to the Marines" is a salvo of entertainment—from the mighty studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

It's a fight-filled, love-filled, laugh-filled story that doesn't pull its punches.

Wallace Beery is a leather-lunged Marine who has to cool his heels while the big battles elude him! To a Beery—that's bad news!

More bad news is his private battle with his wife. For Fay Bainter (who plays the lady) favors pacifism and tries to harness Beery to a rocking chair in the bargain!

Not in the bargain—is the Japs' surprise attack on the Philippines!

Beery busts loose, musters up the natives, and stages a delaying action that includes some of the most stirring front-line scenes you've ever seen.

For a bright, romantic interlude in a Technicolor picture watch Marilyn Maxwell who plays the part of Beery's attractive daughter.

"Salute to the Marines" will give you a lift!

It's got what it takes to give you a great thrill!

P. S. Get a real American thrill. Buy an extra War Bond. Help back the attack.

fight and keep up the devil all the time. I am tired of this. I want to get married someday and live happy like other women. Please tell me what to do so my dream will come true?

Ans: Leave and go into the city and find a job. Go to church and other nice places and try to make some new friends. My one suggestion is not to become too attached to any one man and give up your freedom...do this only when you are safely married. You can find a husband if you try but you won't be able to living there with another man.

C. T.—I want to hear from you before I jump at conclusions. My boy friend makes out like he make good money and I want to know if he is just a cheap-skate or what?

Ans: You have him figured out pretty well...he isn't going to part with his money if he can put off by making promises. If you think you can "pull his leg," you are in for a big surprise...this old boy is going to hold tight to everything he has.

B. W.—The quiz is concerning my brother in law. Is he really trying to propose to me behind my sister's back? I have been engaged two times and when I tell him about it, something happens to throw me off. Is he my stumbling block?

Ans: Stay away from him altogether if you feel he is thinking too much of you. It would never do to allow him to make love to you behind the back of your sister. Keep your business to yourself...don't tell anyone your plans until you carry them out. My suggestion is that you make friends and get out more often with the single boys and associate less with your sister and her husband.

D. F.—Reading your column is one of the joys in my life. I'm studying real hard trying to become a Domestic Science Teacher. Do you think I will reach my goal?

Ans: You're bound to succeed...keep up the good work. You are fortunate in knowing what you want to do when you finish college...so many young people fail to make up their minds until they are through college. Work out your schedule with the instructors and they can inform you just what you must take in order to become a teacher in Domestic Science.

F. E. B.—I have trouble explaining the true facts of managing the bills with the money we have. When I can't meet them, all I get is an ugly face and he says "I give you all I have and I don't see what you do with the money I give you to save my life." Yet he knows it is more than I can handle. I explain this to him that he makes additional bills before I can pay off the old ones he makes and he just files off the handle.

Ans: Little does he realize that you can't stretch money...the fact is he knows darn well that he would never make ends meet and prefers to put the whole responsibility on your shoulders. Continue to do your best for it is better this way than never to see the money at all. Write out an itemized statement of your monthly bills and the outstanding debts and let him see that you are trying to get straight with the world again. It may have some influence on his making new debts.

They're "Tops"

THEY'RE TOPS AT CAMP ELLIS
 Camp Ellis, Ill.—Truck on down—and the Floy-Floy. These lovely lassies who are featured in 20th Century's "Stormy Weather" film dancing darlings were voted "tops" by a committee of soldiers at Camp Ellis, Illinois, headed by Private Arvit Minerbrook, a Chicago newspaper man. This quartermaster's truck regiment unit found little difficulty in selecting this trio of terpsichorean beauties. "Stormy Weather", starring Lena Horne and Bill Robinson has been acclaimed the "best so far" by race newspapermen and leaders throughout America. (Press Photo Service).

CANADA LEE PLAYS OPPOSITE NEW FIND IN "LIFEBOAT"

Something new in Hollywood success stories is the story of young John Hodiak, the Gable-like newcomer who popped out of nowhere to win the male lead opposite Tallulah Bankhead in "Lifeboat" at 20th Century-Fox.

Hodiak's story is no saga of starvation and struggle, of forcing the breaks by sheer persistence. Neither is it an epic of overcoming Hollywood's indifference by ingenious maneuvers.

"I've always been a firm believer in the Fates," says John, with a seriousness that is unmistakably sincere. "I've always felt that if I were the guy to do something, I'd be sought out to do it."

A year ago, turned down by the Army, he was sitting around Chicago, waiting for something to happen. Meanwhile, he was earning a pretty fair living as a radio actor, having originated the character of "Lil Abner" on the air. He had an urge to get to Hollywood some day, but he did nothing to accelerate the day. He turned down five movie offers that came along. There was no urgency about them. They didn't sound like destiny in disguise.

Then something happened. He was suddenly summoned to New York to test for a he-man role in a Merchant Marine picture. For a shipmate in the test, he had Canada Lee, the young Negro actor who had just won the Drama Critics' Award in "Native Son." As a result of the test, John was signed by MGM.

That Merchant Marine picture still hasn't been made, but in the nine months since then, he has played three small parts, all character parts, the latest being a 40-year-old guerrilla leader in "Song of Russia." Meanwhile, not trying to force the issue, he has sat around and waited for the one role intended for him.

He was "thunder-struck" when he was told that he had been borrowed by Director Alfred Hitchcock for "Lifeboat," suspenseful drama about nine people adrift in a 26 foot boat in mid-Atlantic. Not only had John made no conscious effort to catch Hitchcock's appraising eye. He hadn't even dreamed that Hitchcock might be interested in an unknown.

It puzzled him how the miracle had happened.

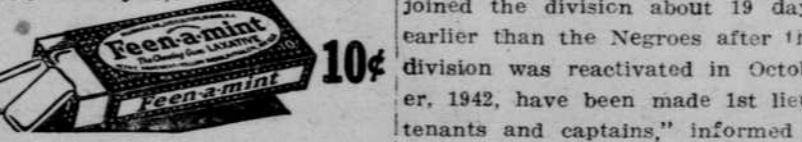

"I finally found out," he revealed on the set, looking tall and rugged and capable of taking command of the boat, as ordained in an unknown.

camp soldier. "In the 365th infantry regiment particularly three Negroes have made the 1st lieutenant grade. When we arrived here the general started a development school for backward officers. In a class of 50 officers whom it was felt needed some "polishing up" all were Negroes.

"This does not represent a situation of inability, as it affects one group," continued the servicemen, "it is out and out discrimination. Those 50 men can never expect to get beyond their present grade."

It was pointed out that the educational background of the Negro officers was generally higher than that of white officers, yet the Negroes have been persistently passed over in promotions.

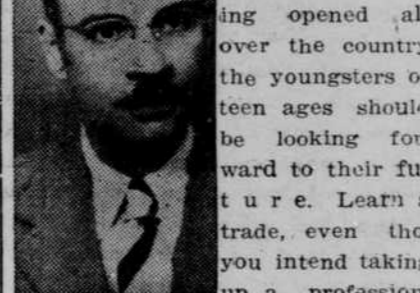

Post officials apparently don't think that Negro soldiers need regular field rations to maintain their maximum health, it was charged, and as a result the food served in mess is a constant source of nausea to the men. Negro officers, it was stated, are so browbeaten and coerced that they dare not object to any of the varied discriminations and irregularities for fear of being "broken."

Particularly bitter are the men over the statements accredited to Atty. Truman K. Gibson and Gen. Benjamin O. Davis that conditions are "in excellent shape" training, "good," morale "high" and the overall picture "gratifying." Enlisted men who said the two high officials were at Fort Huachuca recently to investigate the post must have known that the reservation is a "keg of dynamite" if they had their eyes open.

Dynamite

(By H. GEORGE DAVENPORT.)

Chicago, Ill. (For Press Photo Service)—Now that schools are being opened all over the country the youngsters of teen age should be looking forward to their future. Learn a trade, even though you intend taking up a profession.

In conversation with Mrs. Staats who teaches art at a state school, she claims that she has difficulty in making the pupils understand that they should learn something that will be financially beneficial for them after leaving school. Mrs. Staats teaches at Bordertown, N.J. She took a picture of me at work in my studio so she could show the students the advantages of learning something profitable, and to encourage them.

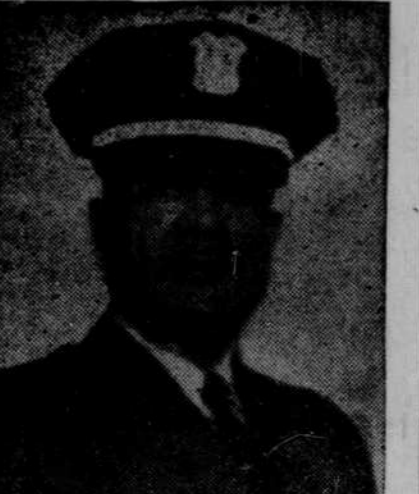

Some time back when most of us were on relief or near about, remember? A young man by the name of Eddie Joseph of Chicago was packing one of those highly prized brief cases which told the world that he was on relief or something closely akin to relief (a writer's project). I kidded this young man so much an told him that he had better go to a trade school and learn something. After much persuasion he finally went to welding school and at present he is making close to $400 per month. Another youngster quite a while back came into my studio and asked me what I thought of his drawings. I told him that he should practice up on his lettering and he could make a fair living and enough to pay for his art education if he so desired. I had forgotten it about the incident, when one day this youngster (a man now) came into my place and asked, "Do you remember me?" I am the boy you advised to take up lettering and I did. I had noticed his shop in Chicago, but never dreamed that I had anything to do with his success in life until he so informed me.

After this war no one knows what is going to happen, so the safest way is to learn a trade of some kind; shoe repairing, auto repairing, electrical refrigeration and motor rebuilding, carpentry, plastering, bricklaying, etc. for the ladies hairdressing, dressmaking, cooking both pastry and otherwise, and like trades depending upon the localities and use to which you can put such trades wherever you intend to live after leaving school. When this other depression comes, and it is coming, the ones who will be better able to offset the difficulties of such times, are the ones who are prepared by knowing something the other fellow doesn't know.

Lincoln once said, "I will study and prepare, some day my time will come." Lincoln not only became President of these United States, but his name has gone in history as one of the greatest men who ever lived. Of course you may never be president of the country, but you can be president of YOUR COMPANY if you make preparations while in school. Do not forget, "LEARN A TRADE, EVEN THOUGH YOU INTEND TAKING UP A PROFESSION" be
