SMILE AWHILE

RATION POINT BLUES
How ration points do worry me! Soon quite nutty I will be. If I want a juicy steak I'm short on points so no can take.
If at pork I take a look I have with me the wrong point book.
If points are red I'm sporting blues.
Or trying to buy with stamps for shoes.
When other folks are using A's I'm way out front somewhere in K's.
I'm crossed up every way I go; What points to use I never know. I hope I live again to see A day when points won't worry me!

DON'T BE TOO SURE!
Mike and Pat were discussing a day's friend. Mike said, "I wished O'Brien hadn't died until I had a chance to pay him the five dollars I owe him."
"Well, Mike," said Pat. "You can pay him when you die and owe him."
"Say! don't try to be smart. How do you know I'm going to hell when I die?" Replied Mike angrily.

LEGION SIDELITES

In spite of the earlier closing hour that has been forced on Roosevelt Post it has made very little if any difference in the nightly attendance. Throughout the week just passed the Lounge was the scene of many gay parties. Friday and Saturday and Sunday, from early in the evening until closing time things were at top pitch. The Matinee Dance drew an unusual large crowd and what a time they had! Sunday evening Gregg Williams took over with his three piece combination and again the fiddlers and some that were not quite so jittery, had a Roman holiday.

A few blocks off 24th street the Open House at Legionette Esther Hicks, 1814 1-2 North 27th street, which she sponsored for the Woman's Auxiliary, was well attended. Quite a number of prominent persons came to partake of hoghead and blackeyed peas as well as refreshments. From there the Lounge seemed to be the destination of the majority, it being New Years Day in the bargain, and there they started all over again.

Oh by the way—you who are eligible to join the Post or the Auxiliary, should do so at once. Why wait? You can't imagine what it means to be a Legionnaire or Legionette now. They are really doing things worthwhile. Get in and help them to do them.

SPECIALS by HILL—
MRS. MAUPIN AND TIN CANS.
If anyone has an extra wheel-type can opener... you know, the kind that smooths down the edges of the cans as it cuts them... we would like to hear of them turning it over to Mrs. Maupin before she worries herself sick over the tin cans piling up on her because she can't prepare them for the can salvage as the government has instructed the public to do.

She is very busy in her little restaurant at 24th and Blondo streets but if given the proper tool to work with she raises heck with every tin can that can be found in her place of business. And she even might be going out and rounding them up for all we know. But even so we didn't suppose for one minute that her zeal to do her part in the can salvage would prompt her to go to the trouble she did last week.
To be sure she had to close up her restaurant so she could go downtown to take care of some important business. But with her restaurant closed when she could have returned sooner and started selling meals to her customers—did she do it? No! Instead she took up a lot more time hunting around for a can opener of the right type with which to prepare cans for the salvage. And we were one of the hungry souls wondering where the heck she was!
How is that for doing one's part in helping to win the war? Yeah, we agree with you; for it's tops!

PATRIOTIC TOMMY
We met Tommy Williams in the J and S Restaurant, 2711 Q street, South Omaha. The conversation started between us as so many conversations have a way of starting; with "Hello". From there on we talked of different things until we finally worked around to strikes and the war. And that seemed to be his favorite subject—strikes and the war. Seeing that he was not a bit adverse to airing his views we got out pad and pencil and more or less, craftily let him on. By doing so we got these facts:

He is a staunch union member but decidedly against outlaw strikes. He told us that in his opinion there should be a greater effort made between capital (employers) and the working classes to settle their differences without the necessity of strikes that slow up the production of much needed war materials. He opined that he thought men shouldn't complain over having to work or being asked to work extra hours even though they don't receive overtime pay. If they sincerely want the allies to win the war, and he doesn't think it can be won as quickly as it is possible unless labor and capital become more willing to make sacrifices.

Congressman's Deb Daughter Takes Bow

Congressman Wm. L. Dawson is shown at left, in the picture above, congratulating his daughter, Barbara, who had just been presented as a debutante of the season by the Royal Coterie of Snakes Club in Chicago Christmas Week at the Parkway Ballroom. Pictured at right is the club's President, Leonard G. Pall. Miss Dawson is 17 years old, was a Northwestern University student and is at present attending Fisk. Four other girls were presented along with the Congressman's daughter. Press Photo Service.)

"After all," he said, "Most of us are making now more than we have ever made in our lives, yet the majority aren't satisfied. But as long as it is possible or until I am inducted into the army, I am going to put in every hour I can to make certain that I won't be classed among those who laid down on the boys who are giving up their lives for us for less a month than some of us make in a week!"
There was no audience—just we two. So there was no need for dramatics or display of false patriotism on his part. Neither did he know that he was talking to a reporter until we informed him.

He was taken back abut when we did, but readily consented to having us quote him in this paper. And as nearly as possible in his exact words we have written him up in this edition.
Now we consider him quite a patriotic young man. What is your opinion?

RAINY DAYS

A man's only natural that one desires to live better when an opportunity presents itself. But to live better shouldn't mean to burn one's candle at both ends. It is never wise to completely live up one's earnings. What of the future?
Surely it is realized that the future should be considered. For when the war ends, most of the lucrative jobs that are now to be had will end with it. For the war is the creator of the majority of these jobs. The earning power of many will drop to zero and stay there weeks and months before another job, even affording a mere living wage, can be secured. Of course this may not happen immediately after the war, but certainly too soon thereafter for the unprepared.

When they return the fighting men will get first consideration. Most employers have agreed to give them back the jobs they left to fight to preserve—our way of living. If this promise is kept as it should be, then we who held them now will be out of luck. So now, while the sun is still shining, is the time to make hay. Now is the time to lay aside something for a rainy day.

WINS $55

Putting ideas to work to improve production at General Electric, Schenectady, is helping the war effort and also helping John Murphy, above. He recently received two checks totaling $55 for suggestions to save time and labor. One check for $50 was for an idea to attach a wheel skid on the end of electrical transporters, thus providing greater panel-carrying capacity.

SHEER COMFORT

Before sitting down at her dressing table for her nightly beauty ritual, lovely Georgia Schreiber, Chicago, draws the window shades to keep her bedroom warm as toast. Yes, cloth window shades drawn to the sill help keep rooms cozy and comfortable even when you are wearing as fragile a negligee as this one of sheer black lace over pale pink chiffon. The layer of air trapped between the shade and the glass seals warm air in, cuts heat loss through window glass by one-third.
