LEGION SIDELITES

by JULIUS E. HILL

Although we have been in it for over two years a great number of American citizens are still lacking in giving support to the Government's war aims. And the American legions all over the country are exerting every effort in trying to make the public realize the gravity of the present conditions.

Legionnaires, being men who have risked their lives in defense of this country, are better qualified than most organizations concerning matters pertaining to war. For them all the so-called glamour has been taken out of waging battle against enemies of this country.

They know war for what it is and not as some would have it. So with them trying to help educate the public to the actual awfulness of war this more or less complacent attitude of the majority may be finally eliminated.

It is high time that all real Americans realize that no longer can "George" do it. We have tried to place to large a burden upon him now for the good of the country. We ALL must become "Georges" and pitch in and help in every way possible if this war is to be brought to the desired ending soon.

In regards to the activities of Roosevelt Post No. 30, American Legion, it has in the past and is now carrying it's responsibilities magnificently. Whatever has been asked of it to do in support of any program of the Government it has done with an "ALL OUT" spirit.

But now it should start doing something without being asked. For there is a lot it could do right now in the community.

For one thing it could organize a labor council or board to help secure jobs for returning servicemen now and after the war. But it is quite a big job and one that can not be handled so well if there are so many petty differences between cliques within the organization that a lot of valuable time is spent in useless wrangles and quarrels.

Neither should this setup be placed in the hands of individuals who might attempt to make a racket of it.

There are enough intelligent men in the Post capable of handling this job without the necessity of placing those who are on other committees and are constantly on them year in and year out having to be called to serve. There has been too much of that. Furthermore this job should be one bearing no salary. That would eliminate those with a desire to serve purely for their personal gain.

And only members really having money should be considered.
