NEGRO, WORKING WITH LABOR, 'Ghost' OF DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

(BY ERNEST E. JOHNSON)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP)—The Negro was the "ghost" of the Democratic party convention, commented an observer last week just back from Chicago. In different phrasing this is a view which found much concurrence among others who make it their business to keep abreast of political developments.

Perhaps not since Civil war days has the so-called "Negro issue" been so persistent a factor in a political convention as it was when three incongruous elements—labor, remnants of the confederacy and the city machines locked horns in the midwest trying as they did to come up with a ticket and a platform that would remain for the party control of the national administration for another four years.

How successful they were will become known only when the votes are in next November.

If there is any one thing which stands out in connection with that demonstration apart from the ditching that was given to Vice President Henry A. Wallace it is probably the very effective way in which labor's managers utilized the attitude of Negro people, in general, and the organized strength of Negro workers, in particular, to further the mutual cause.

Negro leaders themselves had paved the way for this unprecedented show of strength on the part of labor when, long before either of the two major conventions, when they met and agreed upon a set of demands which would be made upon both parties. These dealt with a permanent Fair Employment Practice committee; elimination of the poll tax as a requirement for voting; elimination of jim crow in the armed forces and amelioration of the ill-treatment accorded Negro soldiers; and anti-lynching legislation.

These leaders appeared before the resolutions committee of the Republican convention in June. Ultimately, the party acceded to each of their demands, practically without equivocation. Could the Democratic party do less? The CIO through its Political Action committee had shown the greater aggressiveness between the two branches of labor. There are approximately a half million Negroes organized in CIO unions, and President Philip Murray has frequently spoken out in support of Negro demands, both in and out of congress. In short, the CIO through the years, had carefully nurtured its Negro membership and fought within its own ranks signs of discrimination. It had achieved an eminent position as a spokesman.

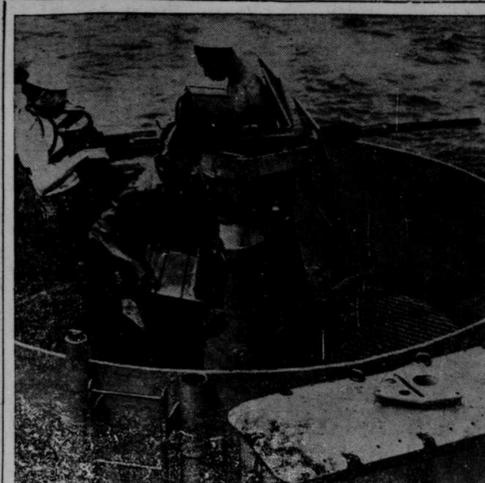

Henry A. Wallace too had endeared himself to Negro people. His famous speech in which he unveiled the "common man" was felt by every Negro as his personal plea for a "break." In 1943 Mr. Wallace showed the courage to stand before 40,000 people in Detroit shortly after the riots and publicly abhorred such undemocratic conduct. He went further, talked of elimination of poll taxes, and protection from personal harm. To Negroes as to all Americans, Mr. Wallace became the symbol of liberalism.

On the other hand, a malcontented south had gotten up on its hind legs and had taken the initiative in denouncing the Negro into the labor movement has already had as profound an effect as has ever been observed possibly through any other channel of expression. It would seem that attainment of the ultimate goal by Negroes may yet be obtained quicker through labor than in any other way.

DEATH TAKES WILL MARION COOK, Grand Old Man of Musical Comedy Era
New York, August 1. (PPNS)—The death of Will Marion Cook here in Harlem Hospital a few days ago, marked the passing of one of the pioneers in Negro show life. A distinguished composer, his compositions ranked tops on the hit parade in the earlier part of the century. He enjoyed his greatest success during the days when the American stage included in its galaxy of brilliant performers such luminaries as Bert Williams, George Walker, Jesse Shipp, Bob Cole, Ernest Hogan and a number of others.

At the time of his death, Cook was 75, and had been in Harlem hospital several weeks following his return from Haiti where he had been living with his son, Mercer. He was born in Washington, D.C., in 1869, the son of the Howard University Law professor, Dr. John H. Cook. He studied at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and later he went to Berlin and continued his music studies with Dr. Joseph Joachim who was so captivated by his technique on the violin that he presented him with his own instrument. On returning to America, Cook studied composition under Anton Dvorak, the composer of "The New World Symphony" who was then head of the National Conservatory of Music in New York.

The greatest star of the screen!

We made lots of promises about what to expect in this year of grace and the Number Twenty anniversary of M-G-M.

One of the promises was "The White Cliffs of Dover". And from the success of the opinions, guess we've a right to say—promise fulfilled.

Another—and what another!—is Pearl Buck's "Dragon Seed". This is the picture of pictures, the super of supers, the colossal of colossals.

We mean, brother, it's good. Just cast an eye on the comments of the critics who caught it at the Radio City Music Hall where it's now breaking records.

"A memorable motion picture!" said Howard Barnes, N. Y. Herald Tribune. "One of the finest!" said John T. McManus, PM.

Walter Winchell put it in his Orchard Garden and praised the "cinematic" of Katharine Hepburn, Walter Huston, Aline MacMahon!

We'll add our cheers for Akim Tamiroff and Turhan Bey. And the direction of Jack Conway and Harold S. Bucquet. And the screen play of Misses Roberts and Murnin. And, of course, Pandro Berman's production!

"Dragon Seed" sheds glory on all!
