Has The Negro Comedian Lost His Humor?

Te amusement world wants one thing from the Negro above all others. It wants and will pay for humor. That is commercial and that is why so few Negro comedians are on the radio and so few in the right setups in Hollywood.

A reason for this situation might be in the fact that colored comedians don't have the jobs from which they can earn the money with which to pay topnotch gag writers for material.

In lieu of the cash they have to attempt to write their own jokes, blackouts and scenes. The result is usually a slavish imitation of something already established as the property of someone else, or a dismal flop in the laugh getting department.

That's where the foul jokes, smut etc. come in. Such comedians as Dewey (Pigmeat) Markham, John (Spider) Bruce, Mason, Joe Byrd, Tim Moore, Tiny Dixon, Jackie Mabley, and one or two others.

Whether their type of humor and gags would go on the screen or on the radio is a question answered best by studying where they are in show business.

One thing, there is a fortune awaiting the colored comedian who can produce humor about Negroes as Phil Baker, Bob Hope, Jimmy Durante, Lou Costello, and other whites cook up gags about their own folk.

Turn back the clock twenty years ago and the rich infectious humor which the world has seen schooled to expect from Negro performers and entertainers was in its golden age.

Bert Williams, Billy King, Emmett Anthony, Marshall (Garbage) Rogers, and many others were in their heyday and ad no difficulty in getting bookings.

There were Miller and Lyle and many others who teamed up to give the world a good laugh. Today that isn't the case.

In place of droll quick-triggers wit; instead of pathos and the other aspects of laugh-making, the comedian of today, to a great extent, relies on smut and off color gags to gain questionable laughs.

Instead of diligent writing of material or securing the services of gag writers, the comics today rely on ad libbing and outright copying of recognized favorites of the hour.

The result is a dearth of humor
