ABBE'S NEW 1945 READINGS ARE NOW READY
J. C.—I have a sister and she (baby) I kept her, then she took her I never did get along. I've tried to my grandmother's. Now since everything I could to help her and she has a little girl which is eight months old. She was out of school, staying in the country with my grandmother. Grandmother let her come to stay with me and go to school. This child has never stayed with my sister, when she was a to help her?

Ans: Send the youngster back to her mother and prevent all this family bickering. If you persist in going against your sister's wishes, regarding the child, it will make her all the more determined that you do not share her daughter in the future. But if you turn her over willingly now and she finds she is not able to look after her, she will be more willing to let you take over her responsibility if such should become the case. Your chief concern is for the welfare of the child, but go ahead and cooperate with your sister and try to work things out, as she is the legal guardian of the child.
M. L. P.—I have been married 9 years, my husband and I are separated, and have been for three years. He is in the army. I get his money every month. He wants me to take him back; he promises he will not get drunk and fight again. I do not love him, only feel sorry for him. I do not feel justified in receiving money from him, not loving him. It keeps me worried all the time. Tell me what to do.
Ans: If you have no intention of taking your husband back, then follow the dictates of your heart, and refuse to accept the allotment he sends you each month. As it is he's expecting to come home, make peace with you and start all over again. It would really be cruel to deceive him. You have other social interests now and if your mind is made up, it is better to every week and decided to write to you. I am 16 years old and am in love with two boys. One boy is from our home town and the other is from out of town. Both are in service in France. One of them writes me sometimes twice a week and says he loves me and will marry me when he comes home. The other one seems to love me also and wants to marry me. I love both of them. But I really cannot marry both of them. The one that's from my home town, his people seem to like me, can you tell me if both of them love me or not? Please tell me which should I marry? I am puzzled up in my love affairs so please help me out.

Ans.—These boys are bestowing upon you quite an honor in asking your hand in marriage, but as you say, you cannot marry them both therefore, it is extremely important that you do not encourage either boy to such an extent that they may expect marriage upon their return. No decision should be made until they return home and you have an opportunity to go with them both under normal conditions for a period of time. When writing to these two G. I.'s keep your letters at an even keel and avoid the issue of marriage tell them there will be time for that when they return home. Cheerful news letters certainly add greatly to the comfort of the soldiers overseas.
