RACE RIOTS
AREN'T NECESSARY
By Alfred McClung Lee

Race riots are only symptoms of something much deeper and bigger than "the breaking of heads and store fronts, the beating and terrorizing of streetcar and bus passengers, the shooting of defenseless and inoffensive women and men, the burning of automobiles." This thesis is set forth by Alfred McClung Lee, professor of department chairman of sociology at Wayne University, author of several books and formerly of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, who investigates race riots, probes to the very roots of the problem and suggests corrective action in the latest Public Affairs Pamphlet, Race Riots Aren't Necessary.

The result is a simple and positive approach to the complex set of conflicts known as "the race problem." Every citizen, especially those accepting civic, labor and religious responsibility should read and use the measures suggested to prevent and cure the effects of the dread disease of racism. Race Riots Aren't Necessary is available at Workers Defense League, 112 E. 19 St., New York 3, N. Y.

While not minimizing the surface results of discrimination, Lee recognizes the fact that these are only results of the real evil which "is the perverse inhumanity of man to man known as racial intolerance or 'scapegoatism.'" He points out that "scapegoatism" is the common denominator that brought about Nazism in Germany, Fascism in Italy, and Ku Klux Klanism and the 1943 Detroit race riot in the United States.

While reminding us that racism is the result of poor housing for minorities, job discrimination, rumors, police bias, delinquency, and negative police attitudes, Lee also gives some very pointed suggestions that individuals and communities can use to combat any threatening crisis or active race riot. He is far too astute, however, to assume that it is sufficient to wait for danger signals. He insists that there is no substitute for a long-term program to promote sound race relations, giving several leads to follow and making the warning that such planning is necessary in all American communities.

Lee is no "inspired" soapbox haranguer with a "mission." He knows the nature of the problem he attempts to solve, and he knows the limitations of the material—namely the sheltered and poorly informed but essentially honest and well-meaning American public—with which he hopes to solve the problem.

Any shortcomings in the pamphlet may be attributed to the lack of space given the author; he has oversimplified several aspects, but he has attempted to compensate by including a bibliography which is qualitatively excellent. The pamphlet is illustrated with the delightful drawings characteristic of Public Affairs Pamphlets, and which are such assets to the subjects covered.

LABOR LEADER
ANSWERS PEGLER ATTACK
ON BRITISH LABORITES
NEW YORK CITY — (WDL)—
Westbrook Pegler, labor-baiting writer who conducts a Hearst column dubiously masted "Fair Enough," again was challenged in a statement by Alfred Baker Lewis, president of the Trade Union Accident and Health Insurance Co., to the Workers Defense League. Lewis, who recently showed up Pegler's ignorance when the Hearst writer indiscriminately and Gwendolyn Brooks, whose book of ballads, blues and portraits-in-verse reflecting Negro life in a great American city, A STREET IN BRONZEVILLE, will be published by Harper and Brothers on August 15.

GWENDOLYN BROOKS
Gwendolyn Brooks was born in June, 1917, in Topeka, Kansas and lives in Chicago. She graduated from Englewood High School in 1934 and from Wilson Junior College in June, 1936. In September, 1939, she married Henry L. Blakely. She has had poetry published in numerous magazines and is at work on a novel.

William Rose Benet writes: "A STREET IN BRONZEVILLE" by Gwendolyn Brooks is the work of a remarkable young poet. Her BALLAD OF PEARL MAY LEE is indelibly tragic. Her book, throughout, has dramatic vigor and unusually expressive phrase. Miss Brooks is as original, as dynamic as Langston Hughes. She is saliently individual.

Richard Wright has written of Miss Brooks' work: "She is a real poet. There is no self-pity here, nor a striving for effects. She takes hold of reality as it is and renders it faithfully. . . She easily catches the pathos of pretty destinies; the wimper of the wounded; the tiny accidents that plague the lives of desperately poor, and the problem of color prejudice . . ."

THE ATOMIC BOMB
When the first atomic bomb shattered Hiroshima last Sunday night, the world saw much more than a tremendous advance in the science of destruction. Even the Japanese must have realized that the human race is capable of destroying itself. Unless the makers of wars at home and abroad realize that all men everywhere now stand at the crossroads, there is little hope for what we call civilized man. And every person who hates another human being, whether he live in Houston or Hiroshima, in Birmingham or Berlin, is helping to point the way to destruction. While the great secret is now in the hands of a peaceful nation, it will be only a matter of time before the scientists the world over will know what is now known in this country.

We who love peace must speed up the progress of closing the wide gap between what we do with machines and what we do to each other. Either we shall learn to live together peacefully upon the face of the earth, or atomic bombs of our own making may erase every sign of the civilization of which we boast.

The Case for India
We in this country know very little of the true story of what is going on in India. The wall of censorship thrown up by the British cuts off all communication which does not meet with the approval in London. We never hear the true account of famine and disease, and when authentic news does leak through, PM is the only major newspaper in the country which carries the story. When young Indians visit in this country, they every move is watched, and practically every word spoken in public is duly recorded and transmitted. If the people of India could tell their story unmolested in this country, we would feel very differently about many of these things.

A New School
There is a move afoot in New Jersey to build a new type of junior college, interracial in character, in which students and teachers will share in both management and administration. The Tuskegee idea is about to function in reality.

Executive Order Needed
One way out of the predicament in which FEPC now finds itself would be for President Truman to issue a new executive order setting up a commission with power and funds to operate. The now famous orders 8802 and 9346, issued by President Roosevelt gave life to the agency which is now slowly being strangled to death. As long as the war lasts, the President is authorized to issue such orders as are calculated to speed up the day of victory. And there can be no doubt that fair employment practices are important both now and in the months to follow the cessation of hostilities.

Russia Marches Again
In record time, the giant military machine of the USSR has been moved the thousands of miles across Siberia, and has moved against the crack Kwantung army of the Japanese. Coming as it did with the devastation of the first atomic bomb, Stalin's declaration of war has caught the Japanese between the most powerful pincers the world has known. Already Tokio complains that Japan is being unfairly treated, and that the commonly understood practices of war do not include such instruments of destruction as the new bombs. Perhaps the Japanese have forgotten Port Arthur Editor of Omaha Guide:

The largest national peach crop on record is now coming on the market and if the fullest possible use is to be made of this favorite fruit, consumers will have to be encouraged to eat fresh peaches more frequently and to can or otherwise preserve as many of them as possible in the next few weeks.

Consumers should be interested in this program both from the standpoint of ration point saving and providing against a definite shortage of commercially canned fruits for the coming year. Having produced this record crop, the peach grower will need all possible assistance in marketing it without waste.

The enclosed letters from this office and from the secretary of the Federation of Nebraska Retailers to all retail grocers in the State, sets forth the situation. The leaflet "Polly Preserver Speaks" gives valuable suggestions on home canning and other methods of preserving peaches. Your cooperation is solicited in helping to conserve and make the best possible use of the 80,000,000 bushel peach crop and it is trusted that you will adapt the material sent you to the widest possible use through your paper.

Yours very truly,
ARTHUR ANDERSON,
State Director.

To All Nebraska Retail Grocers
In order to make the fullest possible use of the largest peach crop on record, the U. S. Department of Agriculture solicits your cooperation in urging increased consumption and preservation. You can help materially by concentrating on peach promotion during the next few weeks. In this connection the following facts are called to your attention:

1. The peak of the peach crop reaching this area is expected soon.
2. Full utilization of this crop means that consumers must be induced to buy large quantities for fresh use and to can or otherwise preserve as much as possible. DRIVE HOME the fact that peaches can be safely preserved with considerably less sugar than the average housewife is accustomed to using. POINT OUT if no sugar is available peaches may be canned without it, particularly high quality, well-ripened fruit.
3. The main promotional PUSH must come from you. Through USDA efforts press and radio will carry the message "BUY PEACHES!" But—whether or not consumers actually do buy them is pretty much up to the retailer. Here is what you can do to stimulate and clinch sales:
Have a LARGE SUPPLY on hand—ADVERTISE by every means available—DISPLAY attractively—POST the enclosed leaflet "Polly Preserver Speaks"—TALK PEACHES.
4. Commercial canned fruits will be in short supply this year and point

LABOR DEPT. IN BACK TO SCHOOL DRIVE
WASHINGTON, D. C.—(WDL)—A national Back-To-School drive, begun last year, is being pushed this summer by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor and the U. S. Office of Education, was backed by Workers Defense League national secretary Morris Milgram in a request to Florida WDL branches to take special steps to combat child labor there.

In Ft. Lauderdale, schools were closed last year to force Negro children to pick beans, and a federal court held it was not discrimination, although attorneys S. D. McGill of Jacksonville and L. E. Thomas of Miami ably argued that it was, and produced plentiful evidence.

Material on the drive is available from Katherine F. Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau.

NEGRO CABBIERS WIN STRIKE

Foreign Insurance
The life insurance companies of the United States have never shown any great inclination to write life insurance in foreign countries, adding that today there are few American companies operating outside the continental limits of the United States. Several Canadian companies, however, have a fairly large life insurance portfolio overseas. In this connection the countries chosen by the United States and Canadian companies operating in the foreign field are generally more stable and consequently there is less risk of disturbance to foreign corporations in such countries.

Lacked Vitamins
Although everyone knows that vitamins and minerals are essential to health, until 1941 about 40 per cent of all Americans ate a diet which failed to provide all of these nutrients they needed. What American dietaries lacked chiefly were some of the B-vitamins and the food mineral iron, and these nutrients have been added under the wartime enrichment program.

Moisture Needed
Fertilizers are of no value to the plant unless the soil contains ample moisture and air. Fertilizers should not be applied to dry soil; so, during periods of drought, artificial watering should be practiced. On soils known to be highly acid or deficient in calcium this condition can be corrected by applying agricultural ground limestone or hydrated lime at a rate of 50 to 70 pounds per 1,000 square feet. The rate of application of lime should be based on soil tests, and lime should be applied only if analysis shows it is necessary.

Cabbage Vitamins
Air, water and heat are the thieves that rob cabbages of their vitamin C. Therefore, the less you cut, cook or have to store cabbage the more vitamin value you receive for your money. Young green cabbage fresh from the garden, washed and eaten raw is the ideal way to get the most flavor and food value that cabbage can give.
