

BEBUILDERS SON
Who are you but the dust of the earth made into a common form? Who are you that you should condemn the faith of one, the race of one, and strive to do them harm? The good book of old has stoutly told to love me is to love my own. Yet down thru the ages this condition still remains. This suffering from race hatred and scorn. Yes they laughed when we prayed from the cotton field to the grave. Claimed our minds knew of nothing higher to do. Yet these same folk now call your name Why? I know God so do you. 'Tis God's war they say and He's with us the way in everything we do. Now God I've never questioned Your word since the birth of my day— But isn't it true what I long, long ago once heard them say— That only black folks like me find time to pray.

Millinder Brings Home The Bacon - And His Name Is Trevor

Trevor Bacon has been through the financial peaks and valleys with Lucky Millinder, his friend and boss. It's more than seven years since Trevor, a shy youngster, joined Millinder's music crew. Today Millinder has really brought home the Bacon, both for himself and Trevor! Few vocalists have clicked with such a consistent list of recording hits. Trevor has to his credit such Decca recording classics as "Slide Mr. Trombone", "You Go To My Head", "Sweet Slumber", "Big Fat Mama", "When the Lights Go On Again All Over the World", "Shipyard Social Function" and dozens of others.

TREVOR BACON

In case the girls would like to know the exact statistics, Trevor is single, an excellent dresser, goodlooking and suave. He's tall, slim, lazy and romantic, a fend around a jukebox, and a terrific dancer—if the girl can talk him into expending energy in tripping the light fantastic.

He was born in Indianapolis almost twenty-eight years ago and the boys in the band affectionately call him "Red". Ella Fitzgerald considers him the greatest of the male vocalists because "that man puts his heart and soul into every song."

His guitar isn't the only thing he's always picking on. He's a critical cuss who's always picking on his boss, Lucky Millinder. He lends the correct conservative touch to Lucius' mad but brilliant ideas. Together they make a musical team difficult to match.

If you ever take a sight-seeing bus through New York's teeming Harlem, the chances are excellent that you'll catch sight of Trevor—because there's bound to be about a hundred or more kids at his heels. Trevor will be wearing a semi-loud sport-jacket, grinning broadly, and tossing nickles and pennies to his admiring juvenile throng. That's Trevor's way of spending a Sunday afternoon pleasantly. And maybe there's a lot in it!

Bacon comes of his guitar ability naturally. His folks were musical prodigies during their own youth, but were not for classical music. When Trevor first picked up a love for the guitar they were amazed and a little ashamed. To the legitimate music lover's guitar is a lowly instrument. But as used by the trained hands of Trevor, the guitar can produce chords as lovely, and intricate as any violin, cello or harp. Because he couldn't practice home, Trevor tramped the backyards of the surrounding neighborhoods, and not only got his experience, he made a profitable week's pay. With the money he earned Trevor paid a professional music teacher, studied religiously and doubled at a vocal studio. Young Bacon has earned his success.

Foreign Insurance
The life insurance companies of the United States have never shown any great inclination to write life insurance in foreign countries, adding that today there are few American companies operating outside the continental limits of the United States. Several Canadian companies, however, have a fairly large life insurance portfolio overseas. In this connection the countries chosen by the United States and Canadian companies operating in the foreign field are generally more stable and consequently there is less risk of disturbance to foreign corporations in such countries.

ECONOMIC SECURITY
By George S. Benson
Any time a workman quits a job in private industry to serve the government, he gets his wage-scale frozen. The government job may pay more at first but the wage is pegged. Whoever works at a generation later will probably earn no more. Postmen and senators have parallel problems; food and housing expenses change but income remains unaltered except by law.

are fixed by law and they themselves are the gentlemen who make the laws. They could vote themselves a raise in pay but there is always reluctance to introduce such a bill. Wage rates in private industry have advanced from 42c to $1 an hour in the last 20 years. They have more than doubled. Informed authorities say that living costs have gone up 30% or more during that time. Doubled pay for workers in private industry offsets the living costs that are about a third higher, but what about government people? Unhappy Workers

One of the big newspapers in Arkansas published an advertisement recently, calling attention to the unhappy plight of the postal employees. The display advertisement was bought and paid for by the postal workers themselves. In a diplomatic way they are asking their neighbors to help them ask Congress for better

Earnings Doubled
Many executives in private enterprise earn more money than senators although they do not claim superior ability. Why do our legislators not earn more? Because their salaries wages.

I want to see the postal people earning more. I favor the passage of legislation to boost the pay of senators and representatives 25% or more. I hope to see the day when a self-respecting poor man can afford to represent his state in costly and wealthy Washington. It is wrong in principle that government employees wait 20 years for a raise.
The source of prosperity is no mystery to men of industry and leaders in labor movements. See how the Labor-Management Charter, signed in Washington last March by labor union executives and prominent men of business deals with the subject. In brief it states: Private enterprise is the necessary foundation for the welfare of labor as well as management.
