HUPP ANNOUNCES U. S. BOND GROUP

Allen T. Hupp of Omaha, Chairman of the Nebraska Advisory Committee to the U. S. Savings Bond Division, today announced the membership of the state group which will assist the Treasury Department in the promotion and sale of U. S. Savings Bonds to Nebraskans.

"The Advisory Committee is composed of a group of prominent citizens, representing various state wide associations, said Mr. Hupp, the committee feels that the continued sale of U. S. Savings Bonds is of extreme importance. One of the problems facing America today is the preservation of the financial and economic stability of the nation.

Our committee urges Nebraskans to continue buying government bonds, as a sound investment, and to hold those already purchased as a curb on runaway inflation. Habits of thrift and savings developed in the war period through systematic bond purchases should be encouraged.

Serving as vice chairman of the Advisory committee are:

Col. J. Francis McDermott, vice president of the first National National Bank of Omaha, who organized the Nebraska Defense Savings and War Savings Committee and George W. Holmes of Lincoln, president of the First National Bank of Lincoln.

Other committee members and the groups they will represent include:

Agriculture, Tom Leadly, Lincoln, Editor of the Nebraska Farmer, who served as Agricultural chairman of the Nebraska War Finance Committee; Banking, Robert I. Stout, Tekamah, President of the First National Bank of Tekamah, and past president of the Nebraska Bankers Association who also served as American Bankers Association state War Bond Chairman; Women, Mrs. Robert H. Thorpe, Omaha, formerly chairman of the Women's Division of the Nebraska War Finance Committee; Industry, J. L. Faxton, Jr., Omaha, president of the Pexton-Mitchell Company and president of the Associated Industries of Nebraska; Labor, J.

JOSH WHITE, BILLIE HOLIDAY TOASTS TO N.Y.'S WHITE NIGHTLIFE; WHY IS DESCRIBED

New York—Two Negro musicians are assured of their places in the listening schedules and programs of most music loving whites that is, the whites who enjoy the jazz and swing. One, Billie Holiday, will probably go down in the books as one of the popular music's all time great artists; the other Josh White, will undoubtedly be accepted as the king of the blues, although such a classification may be open to debate since there are many greater blues singers and players than Josh.

However, Billie Holiday does something in her singing so odd that listeners become bewitched with her art and finally become fanatic addicts of her stylings. Josh White's singing of the blues is singular in that what he leaves out becomes more important than what he plays and sings and that is what makes him distinctive among thousands of blues singers and guitarists. Today Billie Holiday and Josh White are established firmly in New York's diadem of stars of the nightclubs.

Without Billie Holiday in one of the several music rooms on 52nd street, the whole street, sometimes called Swing Lane, suffers.

Without Josh White at either Uptown or Downtown Cafe Society, Barney Josephson would feel it immediately, whether in receipts or in comment of his many guests.

Billie Holiday, Albert Ammons, Meade Lux Lewis and Pete Johnson, plus Big Joe Turner, Teddy Wilson, Hazel Scott and Ida Cox are Cafe Society pioneers. Josh White came way late to be included in that class. But once arrived, Josh has carved a place for himself and today ranks as one of nightlife's greatest attractions.

He has to have an audience that is sympathetic and willing to listen as he musically weaves the blue story of the Negro's soul in the Zanzibar, Latin Quarter, or one of the 'rubberneck' joints. Josh might presumably be lost.

Josh White's climb to fame on the white social conscious singing in which he seeks through music to impress ideas of political thinking, "social consciousness" or it wasn't any good.

Remember such plays as "Sing For Your Supper?" "Sing Out Sweet Land" "Stevenson"? Those were "social conscious" plays striving to effect a political reaction upon the playgoer.

Josh White's New York introduction came via an album of recordings on Columbia under direction of John Hammond, Jr., called "Chain Gang Blues". Supported by a quartet and with his guitar eloquently painting in the background of woe, trouble and rumors of woe, and with his voice singing in the plaintive, broken style of the cane field blues shouter gone citizen as in church, his climb up the ladder was thus begun.

Josh White came from South Carolina and I think he plans to remain FROM South Carolina. He is the usual Negro story of abject poverty during childhood, but also includes the factor of a badly cut right hand which might have forced him to a life of drudgery at the mental labor and thus changed his whole outlook. But Josh seems to have been made of sterner stuff and surmounted the obstacle handily.

As a child, Josh White escorted and accompanied blind men for pennies and nickels and whatever he could get his hands upon. In this capacity, he came to learn life as it is—hard and cruel and disillusioning. That is a reason why his interpretations ring true and why white who don't know of these things, sit enthralled listening to him sing his songs.

TENANTS CAN INSURE COTTON CROP

Dr. W. H. Jernagin of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches is shown asking James P. Davis, right, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture whether or not tenants and sharecroppers, as well as owners, can insure their cotton crop against unavoidable hazards of the Department's Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. Mr. Davis' reply is yes, and he explains that sharecroppers can insure their part of a crop whether the landlord insures his part or not. He adds, however, that the deadline date for insuring the 1946 cotton crop comes within the next few weeks in most areas. Mr. Davis, who is a member of the field staff of the Field Service Branch's Southern Region, and Dr. Jernagin are looking at a miniature bale of cotton.

Treat made a parallel of the bowling story with the Washington chapter of the AAU and its ridiculous program of barring Negro boxers, even though they are carrying the usual striped pants, glibly has reached another stage wherein the District Court of Appeals ruled that the AAU is pursuing a wrong course.

The Chinese girls, Treat stated, have appealed to the Chinese consular general and the appeal will doubtless result in the receipt of a double talk answer from some member of our State Departments ranks who will try to appease the girls with a basket full of high-sounding, meaningless words dressed in the usual striped pants glibly.
