THE ABBE WALLACE SERVICE
P. O. Box 11, Atlanta 1, Georgia

W. X.—Will you please advise me what to do? My husband is just out of the Navy and I thought he had made a change. But now he is just ripping and running and staying out all night and never has any money. When he gets his check this month... he is going to school... he left that morning going to town. When he came back that night he didn't have a cent and I think that a check for almost a hundred dollars is too much to just go out and throw away. Please tell me something as soon as possible.

Ans:—It's very evident that he hasn't realized the seriousness of marriage nor the value of the training to which he has access... he's displaying an adolescent outlook on life at the present. He had to toe the mark several years in service and he couldn't resist the opportunity to "blow the works" and cut up a little. Be patient with him. Lead him out of this period of restlessness and discontent and let him know that you can be a good sport rather than fret and nag at him about his escapades. With your love and devotion you can help him to settle down to a more serious life.

J. P. W.—I have read your column for a long time and see where you have helped so many people. I am asking for help. My wife just won't cook and do as she should. She will go out and drink and when I get home there won't be anything fixed to eat and I have to do it all. She has a son by a previous marriage and I buy for him like he was my own but it doesn't look like she appreciates that at all. What should I do?

Ans: It she refuses to be a housewife and prepare the meals, then she really ought to go to work so that she could have something to occupy her time. Idle hands are the devil's workshop... and you would be doing her a favor to insist that she begin putting her time to good advantage. A change from her present associates is probably all she needs to help her see the error of her ways. What you two need is to make friends from the same group instead of each having his own individual set of associates.

L. C.—I am a senior in college. I have been secretly married for quite some time. My husband who is in the service writes and tells me he has become involved with another woman and has a child which is his. He says he still loves me. We haven't lived together as he has been away and I have been in school. Should I have this marriage annulled?

Ans: Your husband has been completely honest and confessed everything even though he knew in doing so he might ruin any chance for happiness with you and you must appreciate this fact. Before proceeding with your own plans for annulment, see him and talk it over. After seeing him you do not have to live together if you can find no forgiveness in your heart.

E. M.—I met and fell in love with a man who was in service. He now has his discharge and he went to his home immediately afterwards but didn't stay long. He came right back to me. He wants to marry me and go back to his home which is far away. I love him but I feel that we wouldn't be happy if I should go and live around his people. I believe we would be much happier making a place for ourselves. I know we love each other but we quarrel over this point.

Ans: Yes he loves you, else he would not have traveled a thousand miles to propose marriage and ask to take you back home. His idea is not to live in the house with his folks, merely to go to that section where he is established. If you feel that you can't make this concession, then you are not sufficiently in love to marry him. Marriage is a partnership... of give and take, if a successful union is to be realized. You are using good judgement to thrash this problem out now before marriage rather than wait until afterwards and then fail to reach a mutual understanding.

TUNNEY NO FRIEND OF CONN'S
NEW YORK CITY—(Calvin's News Service)—Billy Conn and Gene Tunney met at a publisher's luncheon at the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria. But there was nothing cordial about the meeting. "Use your head, Billy," cautioned Promoter Mike Jacobs, though Billy was settling with rage at the entrance of the man who predicted Joe Louis would knock him out in a round or two at the forthcoming heavyweight fight.

Photographers coaxed Billy to meet Tunney but he held his ground until finally Billy and Jacobs were called to the stage along with Tunney. Then Billy said "hello" and begrudgingly shook hands.

The Waiter's Column

By H. W. Smith

Star State and Mr. Chester Hodges, who makes long drives on the golfing links, are all in the front line on the serving at the OAC at all times.

TO HONOR BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"Booker T. Washington Day" will be celebrated by the 33 member colleges of the United Negro College Fund on May 23, when the bust of the great Negro educator is added to the Hall of Fame of New York University.

In making the announcement, Frank M. Totton, national chairman of the Fund, pointed out that Washington was a graduate of one member college, Hampton Institute, and the founder of another, Tuskegee Institute.

Local committees of the United Negro College Fund in 37 cities throughout the nation will hold luncheon or dinner meetings and public rallies honoring Washington, Mr. Totton said.
