FEAR AND HATE
Psychologists agree that prejudice is 100 percent learned. No one inherits his prejudices. Children hear their parents and older associates talk about minority groups, religion, etc., and thereby form prejudiced ideas about them. Tolerant attitudes can be formed as easily as prejudices, but there is little teaching of tolerance and much inculcation of prejudice. Hence, most people grow up with all sorts of fears and dislikes of various groups. Everyone has a natural desire to feel superior. Those who can satisfy this desire by being "better than average" have little need to fall back upon the mistaken belief that their group is superior to others.

Prejudice limits and distorts an individual's point of view, closes the mind to facts, makes unbiased judgment impossible. Some people become possessed by their prejudices. They can't think. They can only fear and hate.

Don't get me wrong because you can't find your shoes in the morning. Shoes are never where you put 'em last nite, and besides, maybe you didn't put 'em there.

Twenty-Fifth Street Sunday 6:36 p.m., 25th and Erskine: Taxi-Auto Smash-up—...driving too fast Fella", said the taxi man. "Aw I wasn't driving fast", said the "Fella" as his companions got out to survey the fender torn apart from their car. "You dozed off and crashed the car", said the driver as he circled the entangled cars. Well anyway, 25th St. is a narrow, pivotal, blind and dangerous street Caldwell out to Binney. Better watch where you are driving or you won't get there.

DISCREDITED
Miss Della Williams, 2813 Franklin Street, says she was on her way to the store Saturday night when a man walked up behind and encircled her with his arms and said "where do you think you are going?" She said he tried to force her into the vacant lot where the old Long School used to be, threatening to beat her head off if she screamed. She reasoned it was just as well to scream; then the man began to beat her. She screams, she said, attracted passers-by "he the man began to tell "it's alright, she's my wife". More people gathered and the man fled up an alley. Other incidents of this sort have been reported. Protective and other organizations, instrumental in protesting the persecution of the innocent, can do equal good by insisting upon the prosecution of the Fiendish; as they are a discredit and a burden upon any community of decent and law abiding citizens.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH

Watch Sore Throats
By William D. Norman, M.D.

Phillips Hospital, St. Louis, Mo.

Some ailments which seem slight in themselves can cause a great deal of suffering and be a threat to health. Often they are warnings that a serious illness is developing.

I was reminded of this fact by the comments of a patient who had just recovered from a severe attack of tonsillitis. The last time she came to my office for a check-up after her illness, she said several times, "Doctor, I don't know how a sore throat could make anybody so sick."

Of course, Miss Penn had more than a sore throat. The sore throat was only the beginning of her illness. When she first noticed that her throat hurt she paid little attention to it, thinking she might only be catching a cold. Her mother advised her to gargle with a solution she happened to have on hand which Miss Penn did, then went to the movies.

That night she woke up with a fever and aching pains in her back and legs. Her throat hurt worse and she had difficulty in swallowing. The fever was followed by chills, then she became hot again. One moment she was hot, the next shaking with chills.

The following morning she stayed in bed, though she felt fairly comfortable except for the soreness in her throat. By afternoon, however, the chills and fever had returned and her mother sent for me.

I found Miss Penn's tonsils badly infected. In fact, she had an acute case of tonsillitis. Before the end of the day it was necessary to give her one of the sulfa drugs to combat the infection. Within 24 hours the fever was under control and she was out of immediate danger. It was necessary for her to stay in bed several days, however, until her body was completely free of the poison from the diseased tonsils. So sick she had been that she needed a great deal of rest to rebuild her good health.

Tonsillitis is due to an infection of the tonsils. It causes the throat to become very sore and is usually accompanied by chills, high fever, aches and pains. The severity of the attack often depends upon the general physical condition of the individual. A person who is run down loses his resistance to the invading organisms which infect the tonsils and he may become very ill.

Without proper care during an attack of tonsillitis, the patient may suffer serious consequences. There is the danger that pneumonia may develop and there is danger that kidney trouble may result.

It might seem that a quick cure for tonsillitis would be to remove the diseased tonsils. But this would be dangerous. The tonsils should never be removed during an attack. The operation might cause the infection to spread to other parts of the body.

It is often advisable to remove the tonsils after the attack and after the patient has regained his strength. The advice of the doctor should be followed as to whether such an operation is necessary. One attack of tonsillitis may be followed by another.

While rest and frequent gargling with warm water and plain salt water may relieve a sore throat, a doctor should be consulted if the tonsils become swollen or show other signs of disease.

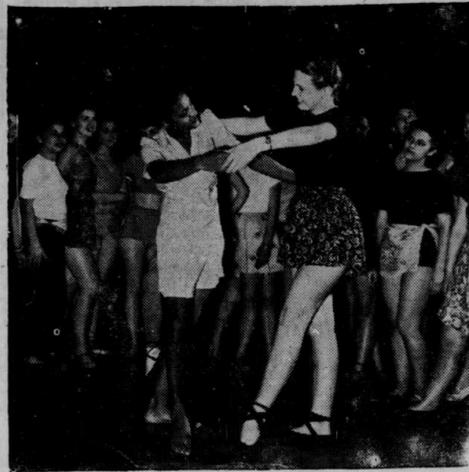

JOAN FONTAINE, star of "Rebecca," one of the most distinguished films of all time, will soon be seen in this David O. Selznick movie masterpiece. The picture is being re-presented by United Artists, following numerous requests. Laurence Olivier has the male lead.

'How's Mitt You?'

THOSE gloved fists of Champion Joe Louis pack plenty of wallop. That's the verdict of gagster Joe Laurie, Jr., of "Can You Top This?" fame (NBC, Saturday, 9:30 p.m. EDT) as he gingerly feels the Brown Bomber's mighty mitts during a recent visit to his training camp at Pompton Lakes, N. J. Louis, who fights Billy Conn in the Yankee Stadium, June 19, boxed a few rounds while Laurie served as the second. Said Laurie, "On second thought, I'm so small, you'd better call me a split second!"

REHEARSING FOR TRIBUTE TO UNITY

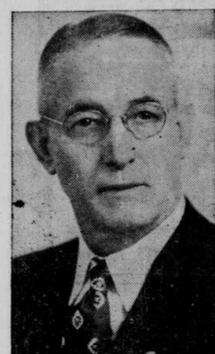

Lillian Williams (left) and Joseph Skelly (right) are shown rehearsing one of the ballet numbers for the musical spectacle, "Song of Our City", to be presented at Olympia in Detroit May 31 and June 2. The spectacle, one of the features of the city's two-week celebration of the Automotive Golden Jubilee, will dramatize the story of Detroit's 150 years under the American flag.

JEFFRIES PROCLAIMS MAY 17 AS "DEATH BLOW TO JIM CROW DAY"

At the behest of the National Negro Congress Edward J. Jeffries, Jr., Mayor of the city of Detroit, signed an official proclamation calling upon the citizens of Detroit to set aside the day of May 17, 1946 as "Death Blow to Jim Crow Day." This announcement was released today by C. Lebron Simmons, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Wayne County and President of the Detroit Council of the National Negro Congress.

HOW IS YOUR PUBLIC CONSCIENCE

RUTH TAYLOR

It was Mr. Justice Holmes who said: "The greatest menace to freedom is an inert people." No dictator usurps power. Power usually passes by default when the old government has grown weak thru compromise with evil. The tragedies of history are the tragedies of the misuse of power. If we compromise with evil today, then are we undone tomorrow. It is seldom that liberty of any kind is lost all at once.

"Distinguished nationally for service to rural education, her untiring efforts have been instrumental, in a large measure, for the material advances which rural education has made in Nebraska in recent years. Kindly sympathy for both education and teachers, keen interest in the welfare of every teacher and pupil in Nebraska, have inspired countless numbers of Nebraska's teachers to a better service and a better appreciation of their responsibilities and opportunities. Teachers throughout Nebraska are familiar with her stimulating bulletins on rural education." Quoted from District Six Program.
