X X. I went with a boy for 3 or 4 months and recently he married another girl although we were engaged. I am trying to forget him now that he is a married man but it seems so hard to do.

Ans: It wounded your pride of course for the young man to be so thoughtless of your feelings but my friend, consider yourself fortunate that it happened when it did instead of after marriage. Surely, your pride won't allow you to grieve over a man who has chosen another girl. The quickest way to forget is to encourage new friends. You won't find it difficult to attract other admirers.

B C N. I am deeply in love with my friend but I don't believe that he intends to do the right thing. I was engaged to another nice fellow when he came along and I broke the engagement. He promised to marry me if I would break the engagement with the other man but thus far he hasn't done anything about it. What must I do?

Ans: You are not forced to live with him under these circumstances. If he doesn't live up to his word, move out to yourself and let him know that you mean business.

RED CROSS TRAINING HELPS IN REDUCTION OF INDUSTRIAL MISHAPS

Chalk up to the credit of To-coma, Wash., firemen a good job of first aid training of the city's industrial employees!

The state's admirable safety standards law, which became effective January 1 of this year, makes it mandatory for all foremen, supervisors or others in charge of work crews to be holders of a current first aid certificate issued by the American Red Cross.

Mr. Burns is confident that as a result of the safety standards law industrial accidents which last year cost $45,000,000 in lost time will be materially decreased. He is a great believer in the value of first aid training in industry. "Any industry", he says, "that has trained its personnel in the initial principles of first aid has automatically reduced its accident toll by 20 percent, according to established averages."

In Tocoma the firemen, already first aid trained, volunteered their services.

Qualifying as instructors in a series of intensive instructor courses organized by Gordon E. Tutum safety supervisor of the city light department and director of First Aid, Water Safety and Accident Prevention of the Pierce County chapter of the Red Cross, the firemen carried the training to employees of mills, factories and all other industries in a city wide program directed by J. F. Burns, state safety inspector for the Department of Labor and Industries, and Captain George Dague, of the city's fire department.
