This old roundhouse has solved a housing problem for a Chicago manufacturer. The firm recently leased the building, built in 1902, from the Illinois Central railroad, boarded up the engine pits, eliminated the turntable that used to turn engines toward their stalls, and production soon will be begun by the new occupant. Up to a few years ago the roundhouse was used by the Michigan Central, which had erected the building, and in 1929 sold it to Illinois Central.
