Chicken Shortcakes a la Dixie

Southern cooks are famous for chicken dishes . . . Try this easy recipe next time "It's Chicken for Dinner"

● Everybody likes hot biscuits—and everybody likes chicken. Here they are in an extra-special combination. Made with part corn meal, these tender, crunchy, golden brown biscuits are a perfect mate for creamed chicken.

For the cream sauce, use part chicken stock if possible; and add milk to make up the required amount of liquid. This gives a rich chicken flavor that puts it in the "different" class.

Chicken Shortcakes a la Dixie will put the family in a happy mood—so clip the recipe and use it real soon.

Chicken Shortcakes a la Dixie
1 cup sifted emergency flour
3 teaspoons baking powder

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and corn meal . . . Cut in Spry fine . . . Add milk, mixing to a soft dough . . . Drop from tablespoon on Spry-coated baking sheet. Dot with Spry . . . Bake in very hot oven (450° F.) 15 minutes. . . Split hot biscuits and put Creamed Chicken between and over top . . . Serves 6 to 8.

When Football Fans Refight The Game, Plan For Big Appetites

WHEN friends drop in informally after the football game, it's a winning strategy to plan on substantial refreshments and provide the experts with a game of Pigskin so they can demonstrate their football theories realistically in parlor competition. While they fight over the game play by play, they'll be sure to have man-sized appetites and a yearning for something hot. Bowls of baked beans and piles of sliced bread with plenty of appetizing spreads for "help yourself" service will be a popular mainstay for the strategists; stuffed egg footballs carry out the game idea. It's good hostess tactics to serve an abundance of decaffeinated coffee so everyone can spice their arguments over game maneuvers with extra cups without sleeping problems later on. The new instant decaffeinated coffee is a special convenience for informal parties where it's hard to figure exact consumption because you make it, right in the cup, as you need it. This full-bodied, rich decaffeinated coffee is a good choice, too, for chocolate beverage combinations because you can make the coffee flavor as strong as you like. Add crackers and cheese and a basket of fruit to round out a "help yourself" menu that's easy to prepare and satisfying too.

Cut slice-size sandwiches into four or five strips for the goal post.

Remove shells from eggs while still warm. Cut in half lengthwise, and remove yolks. Mix yolks with chili sauce and onion juice and chill halves evenly. Reserve any left-over yolk mixture for sandwich filling. Press halves of eggs together. Mark football lacings with vegetable coloring. Arrange egg footballs on field of parsley.
