Father's Day

By N. W. SMITH
Father's Day should at all times be looked upon as one of the very good days by all human beings as at all times it is father that gives children protection, we look up to father for honest instructions to guide us through life as it is always pleasing and for a father to know that obeying, and honoring the lead in one of the family is our personal duty.

B. N.—My wife and I fell out about a simple misunderstanding last year and we were divorced. I love her and I believe she loves me. I live only a few blocks away and I see her and our children frequently. My wife hasn't dated other men and I haven't dated other girls. Do you think I should ask her to remarry me?
Ans: Of course you should, You love each other and it is plain stubbornness to continue living apart. It is most unfair to your children to deprive them of both parents' love and care. Express your love and devotion for your ex-mate and lead her to the altar again. This time—for keeps.
B. M. H.—Five years ago I became a mother while in high school. My parents are very nice people and because I was not married, they did not let me keep the baby. They gave him up for adoption. I was young and foolish. Now I feel differently about the matter and want to know if I can get my baby back?
Ans: Your parents relinquished all rights to the child when they gave him up for adoption. You were a minor at the time and the decision they made was very hard for them, but they felt it was for your best interest. Blot this experience out of your mind and refuse to think about it any more. You would not want to cause the child unhappiness by starting a controversy at this late date. Look forward to other children when you are married.
X. X.—Is the minister who claims to be sincere really in love with me or using me for convenience?
Ans: Well—it could hardly be otherwise, as you are a married woman. He certainly isn't going to ask you to divorce your husband and that should be proof enough that his heart doesn't beat only for you. Get wise and stop playing with fire.
A. L. B.—We are buying a lot and we want to know if we should borrow money from the government and build or just forget it. Sometimes I get to thinking that I don't want my husband to go to any trouble building for me as I am afraid I won't be with him. I am young and just can't seem to see this married life.
Ans: Pay for the lot. Then apply for a loan with which to build. Building a little home of your own will be one of the happiest experiences in your lifetime and it will take your mind off your self too. You're acting like a spoiled child here or late. Actual-ly you're wrapped up in your hus-

Reaction Against Racism Pronounced Catholic Social Trends - Sis. Hurley

WAUSAU, Wis. (Special)—A reaction against racism was included among "the most pronounced Catholic social trends" by Sister Helen Angela Hurley, dynamic Catholic nun, in an address to the State Conference of the Wisconsin Council of Catholic Women here. Speaking on "Women in Catholic Social Trends," the nun described the social tendencies against Catholics as "reactions against materialism, racism, nationalism—variants of the great system of selfishness."

Sister Helen Angela, who teaches social problems at St. Margaret's Academy, Minneapolis, is an alumna of the University of Minnesota and Catholic University, Washington, D. C., where she received the doctor of philosophy degree for research in sociology and criminology. She was a winner in the recent Huter College Diamond Jubilee contest for her essay on how to teach social problems to high school students.

"Women have taken an effective place in the return to Christian life and institutions," Sister Helen asserted, "by seeking a solution for social problems in the liturgy of the Church; by a more determined practice of the works of mercy; by increasing personal holiness coupled with social charity; by the practice of voluntary poverty in order to help those in need; by fostering the ideal Christian family; and in furthering every manifestation of Catholic Action."

Among the Catholics women most active in this return to Christian life, the speaker mentioned Dorothy Day, editor of the Catholic Worker and founder of a House of Hospitality in New York City; Ade Bethune, Rhode Island artist; Baroness Catherine de Hueck Doherty, founder of the Friendship House movement; Dr. Euphemia Haynes, Howard University professor and president of the Federated Colored Catholics; the late Mother Grace Dammann, former president of Manhattanville College, New York City; and Dr. Gladys Sellow and Dr. Mary Elizabeth Welsh, co-founders of Fides House, Washington, D. C.
