PRESIDENT WESLEY SPEAKS AT BOWLING GREEN

Need for Strong Leaders Emphasized by Educator
Dr. Charles H. Wesley president of the Wilberforce College of Education and Industrial Arts told the graduating class of seventy-five at the Bowling Green state university commencement exercises, Bowling Green, Ohio, that "new frontiers are not geographical, but industrial, mechanical, and scientific. Industrialization was made more complex by the approach of an atomic age," the speaker said. Dr. Frank J. Prout, Bowling Green state university, president, introduced Dr. Wesley who spoke on the subject "New Frontiers in Modern Life."

External changes in life, Dr. Wesley continued, have affected the internal life of man by expanding his intelligence, his concepts of freedom, and the need for the improvement of human relations. The qualities needed today for the crossing of these new frontiers, Wesley claimed, were similar to those which were used by the frontiers of America's past. These qualities were the affirmative mind, a continually adequate preparation and the pioneer spirit. This leadership, the Wilberforce educator declared, would largely determine whether atomic energy would be used for good or evil and whether the scientific age would make it possible for peoples to live together in peace and brotherhood, or in war and hatred.

President Frank J. Prout conferred the degrees and the honorary degree of Doctor in Aeronautics on Warren G. Grimes, Mayor of Urbana Urbana, Ohio and manufacturer and inventor of aircraft materials.

'Ahey,' Not 'Hello'
"Ahey," not "Hello," was the experimental greeting used when the first commercial telephone switchboard and exchange was installed at New Haven, Conn., in 1878. It had eight lines and served 21 subscribers.

The Road To Health

By Clyde Donnell, M. D.

Malaria

People are often unnecessarily worried when they are told they have malaria, a disease which, in most cases, can effectively control and often need to do the patient no permanent harm. An important achievement to come out of the war was the development of new drugs for the suppression, treatment and cure of malaria. If the facts were more generally known, we could end the fear which prevents many people from getting effective treatment.

I remember Mrs. Wilson's distress when she called me to say that her husband was ill. "He has chills and fever, headache, and dizziness. He feels weak and sick at his stomach, too," she said. "That's malaria, isn't it, doctor? I've seen many people taken that way. And he'll have attacks all his life, won't he? They say you never get rid of malaria."

"Now, you can't be sure it's malaria. Other diseases have similar symptoms," I told her. "And even if it is malaria, you certainly need not worry about his having it the rest of his life. We know some very effective ways treating it."

When I saw Mr. Wilson and found that his case really was malaria, he was terribly distressed. He told me that his mother had died of the disease. He was afraid that he, too, would die, or that, at best, he would never again be able to be able to do useful work and support his family.

I immediately told him that his fears were groundless. In the past there were many deaths from malaria. But efficient use of drugs, such as those used by the military forces during the war, resulted in almost no deaths from malaria among the men and women who served overseas in the malaria-ridden Pacific and Mediterranean regions. These drugs were found to control the fever promptly during an attack and were most efficient in ridding the body of the malarial parasites. Moreover the time between attacks was lengthened.

I explain to the Wilsons that they now had a responsibility to see that the malarial parasites in the patient's body were not spread to others in the community. Malaria is spread by the female Anopheles mosquito. When the mosquito bites a person who has malaria, she such his blood containing parasites into her body. If she bites a well person some two weeks later, she puts the parasites into his blood, and after about 8 to 14 days he will come down with malaria. I told them that the patient must be kept well screened so that mosquitoes could not get at him.

To protect himself as far as possible, from future attacks, I warned Mr. Wilson that he must keep in physical condition. Sleep, good food and fresh air required to get well. The patient must take no drugs other than those prescribed by the doctor. I emphasized that if he followed the course of treatment carefully, there was no reason why he should not feel better soon.

Here are some rules that everyone should follow to prevent malaria:

Screen your house, close chimneys and fireplaces not in use. Cover cracks in floors, walls and ceilings. Kill mosquitoes that get into your house. Clear up breeding places near your home.

Your community can do its share by draining or filling-in swamps and stagnant pools where mosquitoes breed. Places that cannot be drained or filled should be sprayed. If we get rid of mosquitoes, we can wipe out malaria.

Report on FEFC Bill--

It would "for discussion purposes, it would permit state legislatures to act exempt their states from the enforcement provisions of the bill—Senator Smith asked each witness his opinion of the amendment and practically all of the proponents of our bill gave a strong "No". Not only would Senator Smith's amendment be a bad precedent for all federal legislation but would give the veto power to southern legislatures whose democratic mandates and intent are highly questionable inasmuch as they are based on an arbitrarily restricted electorate due to the poll-tax and Negro disfranchisement.

Committee Action and Present Status of Bill

S.984 was acted upon by the sub-committee after the hearings and referred to the full Senate Labor Committee with a recommendation for "further study." In view of the fact that three of the five members of the sub-committee were sponsors of our bill there is no doubt but that there would have been a flat recommendation for favorable action had not Senator Smith muddled the waters in the way he did. Senator Taft announced that the full Labor Committee had accepted and adopted the sub-committee statement expressing agreement on the general purposes of the bill but not on all of its provisions and therefore was holding the bill in committee until January when amendments may be offered by members of the committee. Thus, Senator Smith played right into the hands of Senator Ellender, leader of the southern opposition, who probably would not have been able to secure the delay on his own account. A full analysis of this sordid episode was made by Congressman Randolph and released soon after the recess. A copy will be sent you on request.

We intend to expose such maneuvers, cloaked as they may be with good intentions, whenever they occur.

Our bill, then, is now in the full Senate Labor Committee and we are urging that it be voted out immediately after Congress reconvenes in January. In the House the bill, sponsored by eight Representatives, is in the House Labor Committee of which Congressman Fred C. Hartley of New Jersey is the Chairman. We are urging that action be taken in the House in January likewise. Of course, if Congress is re-called earlier we will ask that our bill be acted upon at that time.

The Congressional Recess in July makes no difference in the status of the bill and when Congress returns it will take up where it left off its consideration of the FEFC and other measures.
Action Program During Recess

The aim of the National Council and its local affiliates is to carry out a campaign of mobilization of every possible source of support for the permanent FEFC bill all over the country. This includes the building of local councils in every large city and committees in every Congressional district where they can be organized. Our bill will pass or fall on the strength of our public support. Favorable attitudes, potential effort or latent activity will not be enough. This bill must be an issue throughout the country and all individuals and groups who have favored it must work actively for it.

During the recess we ask you and your organization to:

1. Canvass your Congressman for his support of S.984 and H.R. 2824 and companion bills. If he is in favor of it, ask him to do all he can to get action on it when Congress returns and to win friends for it among his colleagues. If he is non-committal or opposed, use every reasonable technique at your command to win him over. We have found two major handicaps in Congress: Congressmen often do not have time to become familiar with all the bills they are called upon to consider and frequently are won over to a measure by the fact that it is important to a considerable number of their constituents. Have a small, well-informed delegation of key constituents visit your Congressman while at home. Explain the purpose of the bill, its provisions and its importance. Above all, point out the many groups that are in favor of it. Please let us know his attitude on the bill as soon as possible.

During your canvass, register your opposition to any crippling amendments such as that Senator Smith and another that is being rumored of placing enforcement in the hands of local officials. It has been clearly demonstrated that an Act of this nature can best be administered by a Commission of sympathetic and competent public servants who have a national, not a local, approach to the problem and whose orders are enforceable by the Courts.

We are preparing an analysis of the probable attitude of your Senators and will send it to you soon for your information and use.

We are depending on you completely for the preliminary House canvass.
2. Contact your local political leaders in both parties. Ask them to endorse the bill and to use their influence with Congressmen and Senators toward its passage. The choice of many voters in 1948 will be based solely on FEFC. Let them know this.
3. Strengthen the organization of your local council if there is one in your city. If none, explore the possibility of creating one. The nucleus of local councils can be formed from branches of national organizations that have supported our bill. Write for a list and any other information you need. We will be glad to send it.

4. Secure endorsement for the bill by top civic, religious, business labor and professional leaders. Ask all important and friendly organizations to pass resolutions urging passage of S.984 and H.R.2824. Publicize all these and let us know about them. They are extremely valuable.

5. Publicize the bill through every available channel. Brief, but pointed letters to the newspapers are always helpful.

Literature
Enclosed herewith you will find a reprint from the Congressional Record which gives the text of the new FEFC bill, a summary of its provisions and a comparison with our bill in the last (79th) Congress. Write us for additional copies if you need them.

We will soon have available in large quantities a pamphlet on the National Council reviewing the highlights of our efforts to obtain a permanent FEFC and a Congressional Record reprint of Questions and Answers on S.984, Fund Raising

Through the efforts of Co-Chairman A. Philip Randolph and other members of our Board of Directors we have recently received more than $15,000.00 in contributions from trade unions, religious and civic organizations and public spirited individuals. This is very encouraging and demonstrates the real support that exists for fair employment in many groups and areas. But this is only a beginning and does not begin to meet the requirements of this nationwide effort.

We urge you and your organization to make a special effort to assist the National Council in the coming months

COST OF CREATING JOB NOW $8,000

Industry's average investment per worker has risen from about $8,000 in 1939 to at least .6,600 in early 1947, it is revealed in a study made by the research department of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The study showed also that to create an entirely new job, installing new machinery, etc., would cost at least an average of $8,000 at the present time because of today's higher price levels. The study emphasized that there is wide variation in the investment per worker in different industries.

In the chemical industry for instance, it costs more than $25,000 to supply one worker with equipment. In other industries the cost is well below the current average.
