M. G. R.—Dear Sir, I have a wife who likes to go out all of the time and I don't like for her to do so. I try to stop her but she said she would leave me if I didn't let her go. Now I love her and hate to give her up but should I let her go if she doesn't do right?

Ans: It's a very unhappy state of affairs as it is so you might as well reach an understanding now as to postpone the agony. Unless she agrees to live a dignified life of a true wife, you can't expect to get along at all together.

E. W.—Should I break up house-keeping or continue on as I am? There has been a rumor that the house might be sold.

Ans: Stay on as you are you would be miserable boarding or living cramped up in a room. Should the house be sold, you will be given a reasonable length of time to find another place to live.

W. K.—I went with a boy 5 years 7 Months ago he left me and is now living with a girl friend of mine. I see him twice a week and he says he still loves me. If so, why does he act like he does?

Ans: He's scared of his girl friend and does not intend to let her catch him talking with you. You're wasting your time with him as he is not going to break away from and is handing you a line. Get you a man friend and show him that you aren't pining your life away because of him. M. A. G.—When a husband comes out plain and shows he does not want to take care of you or give you anything, don't you think it is time to go and make a place for yourself? I can't fix it up or have anything unless it is a fuss.

Ans: Your husband is a little on the rabby side here of late but not because he resents having to take care of you. He knows that money is tight and he wants to save instead of spending everything that comes est in history.

in. Get your heads together and map out a savings program, show him that you are willing to cooperate and the tension will cease between you. F. A. J.—Is there any chance of me getting a good husband?

Ans: Yes, without a doubt. Send for Happier Living lesson No. 4 How To Win A Man, price 25 cents. It offers some very helpful hints on winning a husband. R. M. W.—I am 25 years old and am going with a sweet, little trick of 17. No matter what I do, he seems to love me and he is jealous of me too. He just don't count the young girls and they all know he is after me. His mother doesn't like me so what am I going to do?

Ans: Quit encouraging the young lad, he's hardly dry behind the ears. His mother doesn't appreciate you robbing her cradle and that is why she is acting so indifferent. He's in-juvated but will get over it if you do not appear too interested. Devote more of your time to fellows your own age as the boy is too young to be getting serious with you or anyone else.

An entire block (including both sides of the street) of the Place des Vigées, Paris, is under construction, as well as portions of such famous landmarks the Eiffel Tower, Notre Dame, the Sarcophagus and the Museum of Natural History. Skilled technicians also are duplicating parts of several bombed villages and sections of historic Omaha Beach, in Normandy.

As Veterans See It

Perhaps not much is remembered now about Donald Clark. But this at least is known about him, He fought in World War 11 and was 19 years old when he died. He found himself one day on a blazing boat from which he rescued some of his shipmates. He was burned, but not as badly as his companions who were so helpless that, unable to move, they had to lie at the bottom of the lifeboat. Donald put his charred hands to the oars and rowed for two hours. When he was picked up, still rowing, his hands had to be cut away from the oars. The burned flesh was stuck to them. The next day he died—19 years old.

In time of war we help a man when he is dying—and don't ask any questions about it—whether he is white or colored, a Protestant, a Catholic, or a Jew. The heroism that men are capable of comes out at such times in the flames and devastation of war.

But peace breeds its heroes too. And now, in this year 1947, peace needs them desperately and in great numbers. It isn't required so generally as in war that we help the dying. It is required everywhere and every day that we help the living—and, as in war, without asking any questions about it—concerning a man's race, or religion, or class.

American veterans, who fought and won the war together, side by side, that veterans have shed their uniforms and are now fighting for the American way of life, for a decent home in which to live, and a job which will enable them to live that life about which they dreamed when on the shores of Normandy or the mud and sand in the Pacific. We are going even further now and exerting our efforts to bring about a nation free from racial and religious prejudice through the unity of just such groups as the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Let's all be Americans, practice Americanism, and unite to crush subversive groups whenever they raise their ugly heads.

That is the way heroes of war see America at peace—the way for every American to see it.

TECH HAS ITS OWN FLAG

For the first time in its history, Technical High School has its own flag to represent all sportsmen, debaters, musicians, honor students, and every Techster.

Mr. Palmquist head of the Activities Office, suggested the idea about a year ago. The idea began to look more like a reality when the Student Council backed the project.

After it was decided that Tech was to have a flag, one of Tech's own boys was given the job of designing it. Henry Snodgrass, one of Tech's talented artists, proved his ability when he arranged the school colors and emblem in a simple but beautiful way.

The top of the flag is maroon, the bottom white, and in the middle is placed the school emblem. These plans were rushed to the See E. E. Company of Omaha, where the flag was made. It was shown at last year's memorial program, again at the recent organ concert, then at a recent pep rally.

The price for this flag was nearly one hundred dollars.
