Making Waterproof Glue Waterproof glue having good adhesive qualities can be made by soaking ordinary glue in water until it swells, then draining. Put the glue in a glue pot and add an equal amount of linseed oil, cook this mixture slowly until the mixture is a jellylike mass. It will spread easily if heated before being used.

These are Dry Bogs Contrary to popular opinion, a cranberry "bog" is not wet, except when deliberately flooded as protection against frost. At all other times a "bog" is as dry as your front lawn. The name "bog" apparently comes from the fact that cranberry plantations are built on maple or cedar swamps that have been cleared and drained.

This indicates that 26 percent of the freshmen should receive X-ray to determine whether they have tuberculosis, according to Mrs. Minnie Schaefer, clinic supervisor, who conducted the tests.
