Campy And Jack Are Out Again
Brooklyn, N. Y. (CNS) Both Roy Campanella and Jackie Robinson were reinjured this week after just getting back in the lineup. Campy's was the least serious for it was his left little finger as hit by pitcher Willard Schmidt that caused him to sit it out for a few days. He's available for pinch-hitting now. Jack, on the other hand, re-hurt his knee in batting practice so that he doesn't know when he'll be able to return. As he explains the accident: "I don't know how it happened. All I know that I was lying down on the ground in much pain." He's feeling a lot better from whirlpool baths.

WHY NEWCOMBE HITS KEEPS SWINGING
Brooklyn, N. Y. (CNS) How does Don Newcombe manage to attain a batting average of .406? Says the big fellow himself: "It's like I always say. I just keep swinging, that's all. You keep swinging and sooner or later you're bound to hit something."

Newcombe made it his sixth home run in his 123 win over the St. Louis Cardinals and thereby tied the National League record for homers by a pitcher. About records though, Newk says: "You swing hard for records and you wind up getting nowhere."

ERNE BANKS CONTINUES TO HIT HOME RUNS
Philadelphia, Pa. Whatever ails the Chicago Cubs recently, it certainly hasn't been caught by Ernie Banks—the sparkling Negro shortstop for the Bruins.

For Ernie continues to hit home runs even when the team loses. Sunday, he made it his third grand slam of the season. Still Chicago lost to the Cardinals—12 to 11.

In the second game of the double header, Ernie made it his 26th home run. The game ended in a tie—5 all and called according to Pennsylvania law. It will be resumed right from the fifth inning tie.

work.

Dr. Leo Bartemeier, medical director of Seton Institute in Baltimore and former president of the American Psychiatric Assn., is quoted as saying that the woman who "tries to span 2 worlds" is unfair to her children, especially the very young.

While many a mother works for luxuries," Senser says, the psychiatrist pointed out, "she deprives her children of the greatest 'luxury' they can have—her attention." He also quotes Dr. H. Close Hesselstine, secretary of the University of Chicago's department of gynecology and obstetrics, as saying:

"Of course, there are cases of desperate need where the mother must go to work. But to hold the working mother up as an ideal is just tommy rot." Looking at the question from the family's physical, mental, and moral health, the mother has no business taking on an extra job."

Senser suggests for young couples the following "key questions" compiled from several authorities on marriage and the family:

Does the wife's job really help much financially?
Is it a real need or just social pressure that sends the wife to work?

How demanding is the job?
How much work does she have to do at home?
How long will she keep the job?

Will her working cause a father to lose his job?

Says Women Should Remain In The Home

"Many Catholic leaders are rethinking that old slogan, 'the woman's place is in the home,'" a Catholic Labor Alliance official asserts in the August issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine published here.

Concluding a survey under the title, "Should Mom Go To Work?" Robert Senser, of Chicago, assistant director of the Alliance, reports "there is no easy Yes or No answer. . . . The traditional Christian teaching assigns the wife's role to the home, and Pope Pius XII has called on Christians to lead the wife and mother back to her own vocation." But the Pope and other authorities recognize that in today's industrial society there may be legitimate reasons why a wife might work.

The dollar-and-cents reason is only one. "Another—just being explored by social scientists—is the need for a 'sense of belonging. . . . What drives many wives to work is loneliness!"

Senser cites a suggestion by a speaker at a National Council of Catholic Women Convention that the old slogan be made to read: "Women's interest is the home."

He quotes Miss Elizabeth Morrissey, vice president of the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems, as saying: "So interwoven are our activities, so complex is our way of life, that community participation is a must for every intelligent woman. This may by necessity take her from her four walls but she is still keeping home and family as her primary interest." Also he quotes Robert Oliver, psychologist for the U. S. Public Health Service and, with his wife, president-couple of the New York City federation of the Christian Family Movement as declaring: "Husbands and wives should not only try to make their own particular homes happier but also bring a Christian spirit into the community."

"More and more wives—a little more than 25 per cent right now—are doing double duty as home makers and workers," Senser writes. "The most revolutionary change," he adds, "is that the hand that rocks the cradle often punches a typewriter a few years later. According to the latest count of all mothers with children under eighteen, one-fourth (5.3 million) are working. More than a tenth of the nation's toddlers—children under five—are families whose mother has a job."

Looking at the increase in another way, Senser says, "In 1890 only one wife out of 25 worked outside the home. Today, one out of four does. The number of married women on the job is so great that today they constitute close to 60 per cent of the female labor force."

The article points out: "Social reformers once almost unanimously lambasted social conditions that compelled mothers to leave their infants in favor of a job. But today a 'progressive' school of thought, seldom challenged, actually urges mother to work even though there is no family emergency. But there still are many experts who hold the 'old-fashioned' idea—that it isn't healthy for a mother to leave her children and run off to

Baseball Book Names 8 Players

Wally Moon, who joined the St. Louis Cardinals as a rookie outfielder last spring, is the winner of the "Baseball Annual" award for the National League's best base-running performance of 1954.

Moon's feat on May 25, when he stole four bases in a single game against the Chicago Cubs, was picked as tops in a national poll of sports editors and sports writers, conducted by Dell Publishing Company. He will receive a trophy at the start of the 1955 season.

Other winners of player awards in the poll, announced in the new edition of "Baseball Annals," National League: Best game pitched, by Jim Wilson, Milwaukee Braves, against the Phillies to the Indians 8-3 triumph. Best batting performance: by Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox, against the Detroit Tigers May 16 (in his first appearance after recovering from his collarbone fracture, he June 12 (only no-hit game of the 1954 major league season). Best fielding performance, by Duke Snider, Brooklyn Dodgers, against the Phillies May 31 (his leaping catch of Willie's liner to deep left center ended the game). Best batting performance, by Stan Musial, St. Louis Cardinals, against the New York Giants May 2 (his five home runs in the double-header set a new major league record).

American League: best base-running, by Jim Finigan, Athletics, against the Senators August 13 (he stole home in the eighth, broke a 2-2 tie to score the winning run, ended an eight-game losing streak for the A's). Best game pitched, by Joe Coleman, Baltimore Orioles, against the New York Yankees September 9 (a 1-0, one-hit game spoiled only by Enos Slaughter's fluke single in the eighth). Best fielding performance, by Larry Doby, Cleveland Indians, against the Senators July 30 (he caught Tom Umphlett's long drive, landed against the bull pen roof, held onto the ball—and in the next inning hit a homer to contribute collected eight hits in nine times at bat during a double header. But Boston lost both games.

The national poll by which the awards were determined was won by Elvin Henson, Augusta Herald, Augusta, Georgia.
