Says President Not Backing Up Desegregation

Representative William L. Dawson (D. Ill.) today took strong issue with President Eisenhower's stand that Presidential endorsement of the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision would "make no difference" as far as efforts to comply with the court's ruling is concerned.

At the same time, the Congressman praised Democratic Presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson and Vice Presidential nominee Estes Kefauver for making plain their stand on protecting human rights in connection with the high court's edict.

"Both Governor Stevenson and Senator Kefauver are doing all within their power to further integration of schools without violence and lawlessness," Congressman Dawson stated, "and every American without regard to race can be proud of their leadership in speaking out on this important issue."

"Their position is in strong contrast with that taken by the President of the United States," Congressman Dawson declared. "If President Eisenhower would speak out, with the power and prestige of the highest office in the land, I am sure the American people in every section of our country would respect his call for law and order in carrying out the Supreme Court's decision. I sincerely believe the President could do much from his high office to lessen the force of the agitators, many of whom are using the issue to stir up bitter hatred between the two races."

"Moreover," Dawson continued, "I am convinced that much of the violence which attended efforts of school officials to integrate schools in several southern communities at the beginning of this school term could have been avoided had the President acted upon Governor Stevenson's suggestion, made last February, that he call a White House meeting of southern leaders of both races to explore ways of meeting the high court's desegregation verdict."

The Democratic Congressman from Illinois pointed out that both Governor Stevenson, speaking in New York to the Liberal Party Convention, and Senator Kefauver, in a speech to Young Democrats in Orlando, Florida, of the Supreme Court decision last week reaffirmed their support and praised the men of good will who are trying to work out a peaceful solution.

"It is this kind of leadership," Congressman Dawson said, "leadership on the side of the law, that helps reason to prevail rather than the harmful force of agitators bent on defying the law."

The Last Word

By Elizabeth Davis Pittman

Equality of Opportunity, a union approach to fair employment, by John Hopt II sets up problems met by the United Packinghouse Workers Association in five communities which appear to be typical in the United States. Perhaps it is more interesting at the present time because of other difficulties now rife at the Swift Packing Company.

Mr. Hopt is Director of Industrial Relations, Race Relations Department, Fisk University and has made a rather detailed report of questionnaires which have been answered by 87 of the 251 UPWA locals in the United States. This book, only recently published in its compiled form, is an account of how this major labor union "has gone about setting its own house in order, reducing the gap between national policy and local practice, and extending a faith fully executed program of non-discrimination into its bargaining relationships maintained with in-
