Harry Truman Captivates Harlem

A crowd of cheering, shouting people welcomed former President Harry S. Truman to Harlem last week. Accompanied by Governor Averell Harriman, Truman rode up to the Hotel Theresa for the outdoor rally.

The crowd shouted "Give 'em hell, Harry" as Mr. Truman said the White House needs a man with "nerve and convictions to stand up and enforce the Constitution." Harriman introduced the former President as "Mr. Civil Rights himself."

"I am talking to people who are intelligent and understand the English language, asking you to study the record," Mr. Truman said. "A president may get abuse," he continued. "They throw bricks at you. But sometimes you can pick them up and throw them back." This statement was greeted with cheers and laughter.

The crowd pressed close as the former President finished his talk, and some tried to touch him as he passed. One woman asked, "Can I put him on the shoulder?" Another said, "I just want to see a real President, of color, just one more time."

PARTY TOUCH: Place brandy candies in the center of orange slices and float them, lighted on top of the punch at an evening party.

The Last Word

By Elizabeth Davis Pittman

Profiles in Courage authorized by Senator John F. Kennedy, the young Senator from Massachusetts, is a "must" on the reading list of all who like the human foibles mixed with their history. This book goes into the annals of history and extracts incidents of courage exhibited by men who have given their lives to public service.

Professor Allan Nevins of Columbia University, one of the foremost political historians and biographers of our time, has written the foreword, and in it he points out that men are great statesmen because they have a special kind of courage—the courage to bear the criticism of their constituents and the majority of the public. The men whose careers are described in these pages have had this kind of courage and the illustration of this fact makes brilliant literature for the reader.

Kennedy, himself, grows in stature with the reading of his publication; for if he has been inspired by these men of decision under pressure, namely, Adams, Webster, Norris, Taft and such as they, he cannot fail to grow in affluence and wisdom in his own time. He is the "fair haired boy" from Massachusetts and demonstrated his own popular appeal in the Democratic Convention of 1956 when it looked as though he would receive a landslide nomination for the office of Vice President in lieu of Senator Ke-fauver. He went down in defeat, but he has the resiliency of youth.

To say that Kennedy has the courage of the men in this book is a bit premature. That, only time can tell. But for examples of courage in office, I advise the political scientist, historian and student of human nature to read Profiles in Courage.

Poll Shows N. Y. Still Prefers Ike

New York—An indication that President Eisenhower has retained his popularity with New York voters was given Wednesday night.

Two Good Reasons For Voting YES On The New Charter

The proposed new City Charter has strong CIVIL RIGHTS and HUMAN RELATIONS provisions. In fact, they are stronger than those urged by the NAACP headed by Rev. Streeter when this group appeared before the Charter Convention.

The section on Civil Rights reads:

"All persons, regardless of race, creed or color, shall have equal enjoyment of, and equal protection under all the provisions of this charter, and all ordinances, resolutions, rules, regulations, orders and directives adopted pursuant hereto."

A Human Relations Board will:

1. Advise the Mayor and Council on all matters concerning the administration and enforcement of laws and ordinances prohibiting discrimination against persons because of race or political or religious opinions or affiliations.
2. Institute and conduct educational programs to encourage the granting of equal rights and opportunities to all persons, regardless of their race or political or religious opinions or affiliations."

When you go to the polls Tuesday, look for the small special ballot reading:

"Shall the charter prepared and proposed by the Omaha Charter Convention of 1956 be adopted as the new Home Rule Charter of the City of Omaha?"
