The High Cost of Money

Any merchant or prospective home-builder who has tried recently to go out, as Cal Coolidge used to say, and hire some money, knows all too well the high cost of that commodity.

It must be gratifying, indeed, especially to our great regulated utilities, to find a member of the biggest regulatory body of them all—the Interstate Commerce Commission—championing their right in these days of "tight" money to earn not only subsistence, but a decent standard of living.

Equipment costs money—big money—and it would be an economic anomaly if management went all out to borrow money at today's interest rates of 4 per cent and 5 per cent to finance necessary plant and equipment requirements when the return last year was 3.9 per cent for all of the railroads.

The success of our free enterprise system in America is dependent at all times on dealing fairly with each other in the market place—on a "live and let live" basis.

One Man - Or One Principle?

As an aftermath of the McClellan Committee's sensational revelation of corruption and racketeering in the Teamsters Union, proposals to make unions subject to anti-trust laws are current in Congress.

Union spokesmen in Congress opposing the anti-trust proposals object strenuously on the grounds that it is dangerous and unwise to "try to legislate against one man."

The men who break the rules applied in any civilized society normally are in minority. But it's still necessary to keep the rules on the books and enforce them.

An Orchid To The Stars

Since the dawn of time, none of the world's wonders has held greater fascination for mankind than the stars that shine at night.

The Bible tells of a star that shone brighter than all the others to lead three wise men on a fateful journey.

Longfellow called stars the forget-me-nots of the angels, and other poets have paid similar tribute.

All his wonderful mystery of the ages was rudely dispelled for us last week when we read a newspaper story matter-of-factly captioned: "UC Scientists Solve Riddle of Starlight."

Doubtless this data will prove useful, though we confess to feeling a little let down at being told so bluntly that stars aren't heaven's candles, as Shakespeare said they were, but just great big blobs of carbon.

Tax Reform Needed

A federal law is proposed which, in the words of the Bremer-ton, Washington, Sun, "... would force government spending programs to compete with a tax reduction program for each year's newly-created income.

This law has been given a tremendous amount of support by groups and organizations of almost every kind. It is known as H.R. 6452, and has been introduced by Representative Sadlak of Connecticut.

Finally, the Sadlak bill is definitely not a "rich man's" tax measure. The greatest total of tax relief—60 per cent—would accrue to people with taxable incomes of $6,000 a year or less.

Mr. Sadlak has presented extremely well documented studies and tables which show that expected increase in federal income resulting from stimulated economic activity would more than offset losses due to the reduced tax rates.

Europe Views Civil Rights Issues

number of European newspapers have given detailed editorial attention to the U. S. Senate's action amending the Administration's civil rights bill.

International implications of the Senate's act were mentioned by at least two newspapers on the continent: the Journal de Geneve and the French L'Aurore.

Following are excerpts from editorial comment in these two newspapers and others on the continent and in England:

Journal de Geneve: "For more than a month stirring debates have taken place in the American Senate about the civil rights bill, whose purpose is to guarantee in fact to the Negro population exercise of its right to vote.

The Constitution accords it to him in principle, but racial inequality continues to manifest itself in daily life, for the southern states maintain the privileges of the white man by every means.

The Times of London: "The second cardinal amendment made within a week to the civil rights bill puts it beyond doubt that the American Senate intends the object of the measure to be pursued gradually, and with as much acquiescence as a conciliatory spirit can win from the southern Democratic opposition.

Mancheste Guardian: "Mr. Lyndon Johnson, the leader of the Democratic majority in the United States Senate, has achieved his purpose. This is not to advance or retard the day when all Negroes in the South shall have an effective right to vote; it is to keep the Democratic party united."

Does the United States, which is so hostile to the civil rights of the Negroes, know that France's third-ranking political personality, M. Monnerville, President of the Council of the Republic, is a colored man and a very imminent one?

President Eisenhower and other upholders of Negro voting rights need not feel wholly thwarted. The southern senators have kept up their old prophecies of doom; but they have shown themselves aware that it is no longer enough to filibuster and block any sort of advance.

doubtless have upset the political facts of life in the country. This is not the first time, it is true that the Democrats assure their study at the expense of the Negroes.

Everyone cannot yet assert that Negro citizens will not gain anything from modified draft law if this is finally accepted.

British Comment

The Times of London: "The second cardinal amendment made within a week to the civil rights bill puts it beyond doubt that the American Senate intends the object of the measure to be pursued gradually, and with as much acquiescence as a conciliatory spirit can win from the southern Democratic opposition.

Reading Is Important At School

UNION CITY, N. J.—It is not unusual for a six-year old boy to lag behind in the first grade of school because of reading difficulties, asserts Sister M. Jerome, director of the reading clinic at Marygrove College, Detroit, Michigan.

Writing in the August issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine published here, Sister Jerome has one word of advice for parents whose child is asked to repeat: "Relax!"

Sister Jerome continues: "Your letter described the stormy sessions you have with Johnny 'every night' until you have no more patience to tell him the same word over and over and over again and he has blotted all the pages of the primer with angry tears. Apparently, he is not self-reliant enough to face the difficulties of word recognition without fear, discouragement, and tears."

She stresses: "It is important for you and Tom and Johnny to relax. By degrees accustom your six-year old to the idea of trying the first grade again next year. Assure him that you love him none the less for the difficulty he is having in reading and if your pride suffers a blow, be sure that he is never aware of it."

Concluding, Sister Jerome assures the troubled mother: "If it should happen that you do not know the secret of 'how to relax,' you will find it in perfect trust in God. No harm will come to Johnny if you confide all your anxiety to the loving Heart of Jesus and then live from day to day, waiting patiently until he 'grows into reading.'"

Says Moral Re-armament Is Needed

MACKINAC ISLAND, Michigan, August 16 — Don Luigi Sturzo, "Grand Old Man" of Italy, the priest and patriot whose political philosophy created the Christian Democratic parties of Italy, Germany and France, sent a personal message to the Moral Re-Armament Assembly of Nations here.

It was read today to representatives of 48 nations by his close friend, the Hon. Ferdinando Dambrosio, Italian Member of Parliament from Naples.

"Society rearms itself in order to face up to danger. What is the social danger we have to face today against which we feel the necessity of Moral Re-Armament?" said Don Sturzo.

"When an evil action has begun to be tolerated and the authorities lack energy and the public does not react, it is then that agitation begins on the part of those who feel the situation deeply. What does this mean? It means that we today call Moral Re-Armament. Considering Moral Re-Armament on the level of the great struggles like that of the abolition of slavery and feudalism, society is carried towards higher levels of morality which bring far-reaching fulfillments of the great longings of mankind."

"Today we are convinced that against subversive communism, against the slavery of peoples where slavery still exists, or where race discrimination is not yet abolished, we must have a general conviction of the need for moral rearmament so deep that it carries the peoples towards a lasting and peaceful answer."

"If the first step is that of conviction, we need then to find the basis on which we can make it general. This is given us in the principle of freedom, which is the necessary condition for the possibility of man's perfection."

"If we ask for freedom for the peoples we do so because we are convinced of this truth—that all men are equal in their rights and in their duties to one another, and all worthy of brotherhood, and all called to love each other and to help each other."

"Here we have the central point of Moral Re-Armament—unity of mankind and mutual love. It is re-arming because it is the call to defense and to conquest, but done on the moral plane."

"It is not enough not to do evil. You must do good to others. And so we arrive at the heart of Moral Re-Armament, the avoidance of evil and the pursuit of good, until we arrive at the greatest of all human and civil activities, that of carrying the whole of humanity to the level of universal love."
