THE "free silver" calamity howlers are losing ground every day. The honest, sensible ones have discovered that they were being led by a lot of office-seeking shysters.

VENUE, the summer madness is on those who are jumping all over Secretaries Olney, Carlisle and Herbert and Attorney General Harmon, who attended a special cabinet meeting last Friday, because they declined to tell what was considered at that meeting. Since when, has it been the custom for members of the cabinet to take newspapers into their confidence to that extent? There are reasons—good ones—for keeping secret for the present the business of that meeting and abuse will not change them.

SECRETARY OLNEY was asked if the President had given any consideration to another issue of bonds in the near future. His reply was short and decisive. He said: "Such a thing has not been considered by any member of the administration. In fact, there is no necessity for such consideration, as the finances are in good shape, there is plenty of money in the treasury and the gold reserve is all right." Surely that ought to be plain enough to stop the silly bond story, started for the purpose of doing harm, but, of course, it won't. Some people would rather lie any day than tell the truth.

"Demonetization" of Silver.

"Demonetization" is a word used in this connection with much looseness, and is generally misunderstood. It is a favorite word with writers and speakers careless of what they say, or who intentionally deceive or misrepresent the facts. And many persons are led to believe that "demonetization" means an attempt to abandon the use of silver for monetary purposes. All silver dollars now in circulation are a legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private, and the government makes no discrimination whatever against silver money. All legislation has been directly in favor of the metal in the attempt to support it, and in consequence, the "discrimination" has really and seriously been against the gold.

[The old Trade Dollar is not a legal tender, and for that reason went out of use. It is not supported by the government gold reserve, and consequently it cannot be exchanged for a gold dollar nor for a legal tender silver or paper dollar. It is, therefore, worth only about 50 cents, although it has the dollar stamp of the United States on its face. This is clear proof of what our silver money would be worth if it were not interchangeable with gold. The mere stamp of the United States, or of any other country, could not make it worth, in purchasing power, more than about 50 cents, its commercial value in weight.]

The repeal of the Sherman law did not in any way affect the $325,000,000 of silver now in the treasury, and in circulation, unless, indeed, it strengthened its value and its position as good money. The "gold bugs" are not trying to destroy the use of this silver. On the contrary, all advocates of sound money want to continue it in safe quantities in use as good money.

The government has merely quit making any more silver dollars. That is all the "demonetizing" that has been done. The silver we have is as good, as money, as it ever was, and will remain so, unless the free coinage people succeed in putting us on a free silver basis, in which event it would not be worth more than half its present value, if, indeed, it would eventually be worth that. And it would, for a time at least, be a good deal harder to get one of the cheap silver dollars under free coinage than it is to get a good silver dollar now, because all gold would go out of circulation, and we should have much less money than now, to say nothing of its greatly reduced purchasing power.

There is absolutely no "demonetizing" of silver in the sense the word is understood by the mass of voters. It is used merely to deceive and mislead.—Dollars Or What.
