At the democratic judicial convention held in Chadron last Thursday, no nominations or endorsements were made.

There are one or two tin-horn politicians in this vicinity who are circulating the report that the democrats nominated Herculall for a straw to elect Sweeney. It is a campaign falsehood. The gentlemen (?) who are circulating the report know it to be such, and on the 5th day of November everybody will know it is a falsehood.

A petition signed by 42 residents of Cheyenne county was filed with the county board this week asking that the question of annexing a part of Cheyenne county, eighteen by forty miles, be submitted at this election. The Board being in doubt as to what proportion of the legal voters in the territory affected had signed the petition, the question was postponed until it could ascertain this fact.

From the following clippings it is evident that the idea is no more popular in Cheyenne Co., than in Box Butte and it is probable that the scheme will be dropped.

A proposition is being worked up to attach the biggest part of Cheyenne county lying north of the river to Box Butte county, but it is dollars to doughnuts it will never come to pass.—Gering Courier.

The Alliance Times has sprung a scheme to attach that portion of Cheyenne county lying north of the river, to Box Butte. The people of Alliance can drop that biscuit. It won't work.—Bayard Transcript

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

President Cleveland will not have to put in any time in familiarizing himself with current public business, because during his absence from Washington reports of all important matters in each of the executive departments have been regularly made to him, just as they are when he is at the White House, and whenever necessary he has directed what action should be taken. No official program of the trip to the Atlanta Exposition has yet been announced, but it is understood that the President will be accompanied by all the members of his Cabinet, and that neither Mrs. Cleveland nor any of the Cabinet ladies will go. The party will be due at the exposition on the 22nd inst., which is to be celebrated as "President's Day".

The U. S. Supreme Court reassembled today, for the fall session Chief Justice Fuller presiding. There are 770 cases on the docket, against 818 at the opening of last year's fall session. If any of the learned justices know anything of the President's intention as to the existing vacancy in their ranks they are not talking about it where any newspaper men can hear them.

Much interest was expressed in Washington over the rumor that the managers of the proposed Corbett Fitzsimmons fight were figuring on the use of a government reservation in Arkansas for that exhibition. The government has spoken in no uncertain tone, through Secretaries Lamont and Smith and Attorney General Harmon, and if the sluggers do not heed they will regret their hard-headedness. No prize-fight will be allowed upon any government reservation in Arkansas, or upon any other spot of ground over which the U. S. Government has direct control, and, if necessary to prevent it, or to arrest the participants the government stands ready to call out the army. But nobody in Washington thinks anything of that sort will be necessary. Neither the fighters nor their managers will be foolish enough to defy Uncle Sam.

That "money talks" has just been proven by a Washington man who replied to the boastful claims concerning Kentucky and Maryland which republicans have been making, with a public offer to wager any amount from $100 to $5,000 that the democrats elect their ticket in both states; also, that a majority of the Kentucky legislature will be democratic. This man's money actually talks so loud that it has frightened the republicans blowhards into silence. It is unnecessary to say that betting is something which nobody ought to do, but at the same time it must be acknowledged that there are times when an offer to bet, baked with cash, serves a good purpose.

Hon. Samuel E. Mors, of Indiana, who aided in winning the recent democratic victory in Indianapolis, Mr. Harrison's home, and who enjoys the reputation of being a very shrewd political observer, says: "The prospects of democratic success at our next state election are most promising, and, although the republicans have an advantage in their holdover senators, the indications for a democratic legislature are good. I believe that will not only carry Indiana in 1896, but that the same influences at work there will carry the country for the National Democratic Ticket."

WAYSIDE HEDGES.

Societies in Townships and Cities can do Good Work.

A correspondent of the Garden and Forest believes that societies should be organized in townships and villages to protect the beauty of roadsides instead of paying roadmasters to devastate every roadside. He asks: How many people are there who really believe if their attention is once called to the matter that naked stubs and stumps and ground burned black is more beautiful than a natural growth of a wayside vegetation? Describing a drive through a by-road he says: The roadmaster has kindly allowed its borders to take care of themselves for two or three years past. When the wayside shrubbery gets too aggressive he will go in some fine June morning with his ax and cut down some of the most vigorous trees and shrubs and burn them, but in a year or so the place will be as wild as ever. In this thicket the wild plums have gone out of bloom, but the young apple trees which the birds have planted are still in flower, and the scarlet fruited thorns are the best. There are great masses of bright Pinxter flowers, and the graceful racemes of the choke cherry are unusually abundant.

Of course, the leaves at this season are quite as beautiful as the flowers, and from the deep red of the young seedlings of swamp maples to the gray of the dwarf and the light yellow of the Sassafras there are tints without number. Wild flowers smile all along the sides of the road; violets and anemones, mandrakes, and, most beautiful of all, the columbines, unite with the shrubberies to make pictures of rich and varied beauty, and new ones greet the wayfarer at every step. No doubt the "inescapable joy of spring" makes everything look beautiful at this season, but this by-road will continue beautiful all summer long, and have fresh attractions every day in the way of foliage, flowers and fruit.

Happy Malloquin.

As for the people, he it understood that a Malloquin is no more a Spaniard than a Shtlander is a Scot. Like his Moro-Aragonese forebears, he is a lazy, ill-conditioned, unenterprising sloth, with but one idea of life—that of siesta. The number of those who live by active and visible labor is astonishingly small. The first thing that strikes you on landing in Palma is that it is a place where everything long ago left off happening. Of life there it may truly be said: "Les jours se suivent et se ressemblent." Palma is as quiet as Malta is noisy, and that is saying a good deal. Food is cheap and abundant. A robber is as rare as a beggar; and life and property are perfectly secure in every corner of the island. The people, if not active in the cultivation of moral virtue, at least show a want of sympathy for that which is violent or uncharitable; though ignorant, idle, and superstitious, they are honest and inoffensive, and live in the bond of peace. If a couple of common folk have a difference they straighten it out with their fists, and neither is the worse.—Chamber's Journal.

Bloomers Blossom at Newport.

Newport, writes a summer correspondent at that place, has taken to bloomers at last. Until this week not a divided skirt of any description had been seen, although it was a well-known fact that all the young ladies who ride had costumes on hand, and only awaited a leader. This week the more courageous have donned their new suits and made their debut. One now has only to seek out any of the most secluded cycling haunts in the early morning hours to find the fair riders training for graceful riding postures in "rational dress." The new costumes are all in dark grays and browns or black throughout, and only the fullest bloomer patterns with high gaiters are seen. It is now only a matter of days before bloomer costumes for the wheel will be altogether the thing at Newport.—St. Louis Republic.

Didn't know Henry Ward Beecher.

Let me tell you a story of old James Lenox, the founder of the library that bears his name. About twenty-five years ago, when Henry Ward Beecher was in the south of his fame, he came over to see the Lenox library. It was before it had been given to the public, but Mr. Lenox had announced his intention of doing so. Mr. Beecher, sent in his card. "Beecher? Beecher?" said the old man, softly, as he turned the card of the great Brooklyn clergyman over in his delicate white fingers. "I don't think I know him, James," to his English butler, who had brought the card to his master. "James, pray say to the gentleman that Mr. Lenox's rule is to never admit any person to his library who is unknown to him." Mr. Lenox had never heard of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.—New York Times.

Found the Cavern of a Mince.

A party of boys were out berrying at the south side, near Hartford, recently when, crossing rock woodland, they came upon a small cavern between two hills. The mouth of this cavern was so small that they were obliged to crawl in on their hands and knees. When once inside, it was found large enough to hold ten men. On looking around they found an old frying pan and kettle almost eaten up with rust, and also an old chair. After further investigation they found in the dirt two old Spanish coins bearing the dates of 1675 and 1690, and also another ancient coin, the date not distinguishable. This cavern was once inhabited by one John Frothingham, a miser, some forty years ago, who died there. All trace of the cavern in the woods had been lost until found by the boys.
