The Boss worm Medicine.

H. P. Kumpe, Druggist Leighton, Ala., writes: "One of my customers had a child, which was sick, and threw up all food, could retain nothing on its stomach. He bought one bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge, and it brought up 119 worms from the child. It's the boss worm medicine in the world." White's Cream Vermifuge is also the children's tonic. It improves their digestion and assimilation of food, strengthens their nervous system and restores them to the health, vigor and elasticity of spirits natural to childhood. 25c at Ed. Of Galveston, Texas.

"Wine of Cardui is indeed a blessing to tired women. Having suffered for seven years with weakness and bearing-down pains, and having tried several doctors and different remedies with no success, your Wine of Cardui was the only thing which helped me, and eventually cured me. It seemed to build up the weak parts, strengthen the system and correct irregularities."

By "tired women" Mrs. Adams means nervous women who have disordered menses, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles or any of these ailments that women have. You can cure yourself at home with this great women's remedy, Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui has cured thousands of cases which doctors have failed to benefit. Why not begin to get well today? All druggists have $1.00 bottles. For any stomach, liver or bowel disorder Theodor's Black-Draught should be used.

THE ISLAND OF GUAM

BY H. H. HIATT.
Agana, Island of Guam, April 4th, 1902.—REPUBLICAN.—Last week in company with my two boys, and our two little Chamorro boys, I walked across this island and back again in one day. The boys went for fun, and I went to study the geology of the island. I had noticed that the earthquake movements were a series of seeming pushes from the north, and hence assumed it to be possible that the island is slowly sinking on the south and rising on the north. Just across the island from Agana is the site of an old town named Pago, on the Pago river. This town has been abandoned, and the cause is very evident, for the low land upon which it was built is now so near the ocean level, that it is subject to tidal inundations. The mouth of the Pago river is very deep, and nearly fifty yards wide. There is an absence of precipitous headlands, and water worn caverns on the south. On the north all the rivers are shallow and pour into the ocean with rapid current, and high escapements and caverns are common. It can hardly be doubted that a slow sinking on the south and rising on the north of this island is going on. In conformity with the general rule, however, the whole island is slowly subsiding, along with all islands of the Pacific ocean in this latitude. There are many reasons to believe that the northeastern spur of this island was formed a long time before the southern or main part. From Agana to Pago is a kind of island basin, between the northeastern and southern parts. The highest mountain is Mt. Rosa on the east, and it lacks the rugged contour of the newer and southern mountains. The large trees are nearly all on the northeastern spur, while a large portion of the southern part is rough prairie, with some of the highest peaks entirely bare. I am certain if a level were placed upon our oldest building—the Catholic church—it would show that the south end is the lower. Our trip to Pago was very tiresome, yet quite interesting. Most of the way is along an old road to Pago, but which now is merely a Carabao trail. It goes through bamboo thickets and jungle so dense that it seemed very like a tunnel through verdure. When thirsty, our Chamorro boy would run up a cocoa nut tree and pull off and drop four or five nuts, which we opened with a machete. A cocoa nut holds from two to three glass-fulls of water, which is very palatable—to those who like it. There are wagon loads of full-grown cocoa nuts rotting under the trees, which have been pulled simply for drink. At Pago we got a bamboo raft, and went out to the middle of Pago river, where the aunts, worms and centepeds could not molest us, and with our umbrellas for awnings, and a bamboo pole for pillow, we slept almost two hours, fanned by the sea breeze, and "Rocked Upon the Billows of the Deep." Gradually the enrollment page is filling; there being eighty-one names adorning it.
Deputy Supt. Teagarden is so well known that it is sufficient to say his talk was a good one.
The instructors are patiently bearing with the students and bearing them through the dark places.
Many students celebrated the Fourth out of town and by the way they are coming in this week they believe in keeping a good thing going while they can.
Dr. Pickett was present yesterday morning and used as his subject "Patriotism" which was very fitting and the Dr. handled the subject in his usual comic yet impressive manner.
The literary society will give its final program on next Saturday afternoon a 2 o'clock. The program committee, Miss Moody, Beckmeth, Comer, Jackson and Luce are arranging the program, consequently it will be a good one. The public is especially invited.

Never before in the history of the summer school have the students been favored by having so many able speakers to address them. Among the recent speakers are Rev. Allison of the Christian church who gave us a splendid talk in which was embodied some good advice and thoughts which could well be meditated upon.
Rev. Dr. Xanders of the Episcopal church gave a most excellent talk Tuesday on the subject of "Character building" in which was ground some deep thoughts and good practical suggestions which should not be overlooked or cast off lightly by the teachers. He dwelt especially upon the Silent Influences and showed how the teachers in a great way is responsible for the character of the child that is entrusted in their care. He also left the thought that the responsibility of the teacher is no light matter and should be considered well before the profession chosen for unless we are conscious of the responsibility we are so apt to be narrow in our teachings, and if the teacher is narrow the child is likewise narrow and not able to fill the place which he should hold. The doctors talk was so full of good thoughts that unless it were copied it is impossible to give only a vivid idea of its value. Those who failed to hear him certainly missed a great thing.

Male Animals Prohibited from Running at Large.

At the last session of the legislature the law relating to male animals, stallions, jacks, bulls, bucks or boars was amended so as to provide for any resident of the county that owns or occupies land to take up any of the above mentioned animals that may be running at large. The party taking up such animal is required to give notice to the owner if known to him. If such owner does not appear within twenty days after receiving notice to claim his property and pay damages the person taking up such animal shall give notice to the sheriff or constable in the county in which animal is taken, who shall sell the animal so taken at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, having twenty days notice of the time and place of sale with a description of the property, by publishing the same in some news paper of said county of general circulation for twenty days. Out of the proceeds the cost and damages shall be paid and the balance turned over to the county treasurer for the school fund. The owner has the right to claim and prove ownership of the property within a year after the sale. In case he does prove ownership satisfactorily to the county board of Supervisors within the year, the board is authorized to cause to be issued to him a county warrant for the amount turned over to the county treasurer.
