

their glory fade, oh, the wild charge they made all the world wondered." Demand that we portray the distant rumble that told of the advance of the artillery, let the world hear again the crash and bang as they swing past there on the left; let the ear catch anew the swish and crack of whip, as now near, now off horse is madly urged to nobler effort; let the blood surge as the bugle sounds fourth "Left front into line, action front," and the very heavens quake as the salvos ring. Open once again to our gaze the scene of Shiloh's broken line; pilot us, amid belching fury and flame, up the Vesuvius like hill of Chattanooga; pierce the scarlet mist of old Lookout; and permit us to see you nail the Old Flag in eternal victory upon the staff of Appomattox. And then bid us cast the vision far to see the stretching line of earthen tents that dot the horizon from the Mason and Dixon Line to where the southern seas murmur their requiem; command of us that while we look, we learn the eloquence of epitaph "Unknown." Let us there cherish the vision until it merges into the mustering scene of the grand re-union when from the great roll of the Commander in Chief their Names shall be read in honor. Turn aside now from this vast host to one scene from among many thousand stoop with pitying glance, while tender hand brush back the matted lock from the throbbing brow of a prostrate yank, catching the eric low whisper, as in fevered fancy the sufferer is at home again. As you look, each drop of death sweet, catching the light of your sympathy becomes transfused into lustrous diamond studding an encircling diadem of fame. Fathers they did beget us, you have right to expect increasing sense of duty on our part as on yours there comes decreasing ranks.

Appreciation of these domestic phases of duty, will better fit us for the faithful performance of those brought to our doors by foreign relations. As you gradually are being lifted to the higher roll call, your mantel has fallen upon trusty shoulders. And, when by the divine ordering the tree that bears the fruitage of justice,

Attention Farmers:

Why remain in the North and stay in doors six months in the year consuming what you raise during the other six months? Go South where you can work out doors every month in the year, and where you are producing something the year round. If you are a stock raiser you know your stock are now "eating their heads off" and, besides, have to be protected from the rigors of winter by expensive shelter. Cost of production determines place of production, and Alabama and Florida can produce beef and sheep cheaper than any other state, and must become the center of a great industry already begun. Economical stock feeding requires the combination of both flesh forming and fat forming foods in certain proportions. Alabama and Florida contain millions of acres of untilled cheap range, and these lands when cultivated produce in abundance the velvet bean and cassava, the first a flesh producer, and the latter a fat producer, and they are the cheapest and best fattening materials known to the world. education and progress, has been planted by America's hands upon benighted shores, then it is our duty to place round about that tree a protecting fence of your sons, whose characters will destroy the worm of internal dissension, and whose bayonets keep aloof the cribbing of foreign potentate, until the tree shall have reached the strength of maturity, and no longer need the shadow of our flag as a shelter from the sun of greed.

From the broad reaches of his patrol, God grant that the American Eagle can continue to cry from the Post of Duty "All well."

The interpretation of this duty and the preservation of its character must be sought in the culture of Conscience. The garments of sorrow, the unfilled chair, and the flag dotted graves throughout ever section of the North in the days following "The Sixties" were and are a colossal and imperishable memorial to duty as interpreted by the American conscience. Far easier would it have been for the Boys in Blue to have spent the seething Summers neath the kindly shade of Northern pine, and the chill of winter by crackling log and cheery hearth. But not until 2,800,000 sets of Union buttons flashed their defiance to Southern cannon, not until 300,000 heroes slept in the bivouac of the dead, not until 175,000 faces blanched and sank in the loathsomeness of Dixie's prisons, and 500,000 physical wrecks were being nursed in a nation's arms, then and only then was it felt that the American Conscience had been purged in the scarlet of its own life blood and made whiter than the snow. The result was that the national conscience became so tender from its purging, that Cuba's appeal sent its glorious power to the seat of Spanish oppression and blessed with freedom our Child in the land of Sunshine.

But one thing more would we ask of you by way of service, ye beg, that with the prestige of your past, you would enforce this fact—that the national conscience is but the aggregate of the conscience of the individual citizen. Tell us by the right you have thought the preservation of our national life, that through the glass of your experience, America need fear no foreign foe or hostile mass. Assure us that the emigrant from the father land becomes the sustainer of the Republic; that assimilation transforms the sons of Britan, that the Erin amalgamation was certified in the heroism of the Irish Brigade; that the dough of Italian and Slav newcomer will become the finished loaf of American bread through the leaven of our sacred institutions. That these are not dangers but opportunities. But that the danger of which you have the right to warn us in the degeneracy of the individual conscience. On China field, on Balkan Sea, at Russian Capital, before the throne of Spain, the National conscience stands the limelight scrutiny of envy untarnished and uncharged; but at its base is a force which either can make for perpetuity or disintegration. The individual man or woman with impaired or no conscience at all is a graver menace to the institutions which you have preserved than the combined attacks of the anarchists of the world. The integrity of individual conscience will cement with its purity the entire structure of our nation throughout all coming time.

From the sentry station of Conscience as yet our patrol can report "All's well."

The integrity of the national conscience has engendered another outpost in our nation affairs, a Confidence unequalled in international history. Victors of many battles, where can the opening chapters of this confidence be laid? Recall the tumultuous scenes of the reconstruction period, listen to the frenzied cry of Northern demagogue for the visitation of vengeance upon a vanquished opponent, until amid the confusion your eyes rest on the man who violated the stillness of thirty nights with that relentless and methodic order "By the left flank, forward" until he had hammered into submission the magnificent opposition of your splendid foe, and now with the smoke of Vicksburg and the powder grim of Appomattox not yet entirely gone, General U. S. Grant holds aloft a staying hand and in the words "My parole is the honor of the nation" laid the foundation of the confidence of today. Until, a note of protest born by the American Eagle can trim the claws and muzzle the greed of the Russian Bear; can kindle anew the fires of hope and fountain forth the tears of gratitude upon Mongolian countenance; can compel the respect of Germany, and the admiration of our noble mother, Old England.

That confidence given birth by fair play to "Our Own" has permeated every relation in international intercourse. The American arms have become the speaking trumpets of justice. American diplomacy the vehicle of straight forward dealing between nation and nation. And the waters of alien seas riot in new found exhilaration when they mirror back to heaven the divinely spangled emblem that waves o'er the producers of American genius.

Warriors of the hour of our Country's need, you are in the era where sunset is blending into sunrise; the westward glide of your life's sun plays upon billows of surging success and lengthens its shadow Eastward in the peace of twilight; as you listen for the sunset gun, and the restful notes of tatter, you can hear its echoes blend away into the salvo of Reveille, for the sun never sets on the flag of Columbia. One by one we fold you in its loving stripes and light your way hence with the brilliancy of its stars and as we bid you God speed in your march to the dawning of the eternal day, let this be the companion of your passing. In the hands of your children the blood of your loyalty becomes more intense, the crimson deeper hued, and the white unsullied in its purity, for from the far flung outposts of Influence, Duty, Conscience and Confidence, in this nation's hour of twelve, the American Eagle on his patrol bids you sleep in peace "All's well."

High Water and Fire.

Portions of Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and South Eastern Nebraska has experienced the highest waters in the past week ever known to those localities. At Des Moines, Ia., the river was two feet higher than ever known. From 6000 to 10,000 people were driven from their homes and the large factories were flooded and had to be shut down, throwing thousands out of employment. Nine persons are known to have been drowned.

At Topeka, Kansas, the lower portions were not only flooded, but fire broke out from the flooding of a lime house, which caused the lime to "slack." Several hundred buildings were burned and many lost their lives by burning or drowning. Owing to the velocity of the current of water it was impossible to enter it with relief boats such as they had to use. Hundreds of people saved themselves by climbing on the roofs of houses and floating buildings. The damage is estimated in Topeka at $1,000,000.

It is estimated that fully 200 people lost their lives at that point. Several steam and gasoline launches were shipped in which enabled them to rescue hundreds of others that would have perished.

At Kansas City the destruction to property was still worse. The destruction to property was still worse. The property loss is estimated at $1,000,000, and upwards of fifty persons are known to have been drowned. To increase the destruction, several fires broke out in the flooded districts. The water spread over twelve square miles of the city and its suburbs.

At Armourdale, the packing district the destruction was the greatest. The packing industry sustained a loss of $2,500,000. Argentine, another suburb sustained a loss estimated at $500,000. Armourdale had a population of 16,000 people and all were driven out and the site of the city is only marked by the tops of the houses which were not washed away.

The railroads that passed through the flooded districts have been compelled to abandon traffic, and great damage has been sustained in the destruction of tracks, road beds and bridges. The Blue river of Nebraska was out of its banks at many points. Beatrice sustained the greatest damage along the stream in this state. Many buildings were washed away and the crops along the stream were destroyed. At Lincoln the low lands were flooded, the rail road yards were included in the flooded districts. The waters began to recede Monday morning at all the larger points. At Des Moines, Kansas City, Topeka and other cities where large numbers were rendered homeless, public buildings were thrown open and cots and provisions were provided by the city authorities.
