The decimated reform forces in Custer county seem to have taken the Denver declaration seriously.—Bee.

The populists in their resolutions strictly avoided mention of short comings of the state and county officials when in power or their great hankering after railroad accommodations and free transportation.

The mid-road populists completely captured the pop convention Monday. Tom Holliday, Jas. Stockham and A. B. Hartley controlled the machinery and those who so openly denounced them two years ago had not a word to say against it.

The pop resolutions in speaking of the indebtedness of the county wiped out in the ten years they were in control, neglected to state the republican administration turned over to them in credits in favor of the county

Glasses That Suit Your Eyes
 Your eyes are what you want when you need glasses at all. Glasses that are not what your eyes require may be a hindrance instead of a help to good vision. It is also very important that the frames hold the glasses in a proper position in front of the eyes. It will cost you nothing but a few moments of your time to step in and see if you need glasses.

more than enough to liquidate the indebtedness of the county.

Col. Bryan in the last week's issue of the Commoner disapproved of the action of the Denver conference, and viewed it as traitorous to the true cause of reform and a complete surrender to the middle of the road populists. And now the populists of Custer county has in the face of their pratron saint endorsed the action of the Denver conference, and surrendered the party to the middle of the roaders.

Judge Munger of the United States circuit court has decided that the Union Pacific railroad shall allow the Great Western to pass over its bridge at Omaha. This will furnish railroad competition to Omaha and South Omaha that the U. P. did not seem to want. In view of the fact that congress granted the right and aided in the construction of the U. P., reserving the rights of the people in the use of the bridge, we regard the decision strictly right.

It is said, on good authority, that there are as many as 4,000 newspapers in the United States, that do not print regular editions or more than four quires—ninety-six copies. It is the legal advertising and a job office that makes these papers possible.

"An examination of the latest issue of the American Newspaper Directory reveals the fact that in Nebraska the Custer County Republican has a higher circulation rating than is accorded to any other paper in Broken Bow."—Printers Ink.

A. Fonda For Supervisor of the Sixth District.

The republican supervisors convention for the Sixth District held Saturday August 1st, nominated A. Fonda of Oconto, for Supervisor of that district. The nominee is one of the substantial farmers of that vicinity. He has a fine farm well improved and neatly kept, five miles south of Oconto. His farm can not help to impress one who sees it that he is one of the farmers in Custer county, who takes pride in his surroundings and knows how to spend his money to best advantage. Such a man can safely be intrusted with the management of the affairs of Custer county. His election should be assured with a large majority.

Sullivan's Speech.

Judge Sullivan's speech Monday before the pop convention answered its purpose in awaking the prejudices of his pop followers, notwithstanding it was foreign to fact. His arraignment of the republican party because of the existence of trusts and corporations has no foundation in fact, nor is it true that the republican party or its adherents believe in or condone the excessive rates charged by trusts or corporations any more than he does. Trusts and corporations of moneyed men are purely in the interests of large business transactions and they have for their object the cheapening of the expense of manufacture, product or transportation. This results in producing a greater profit to the company, but does not decrease the price of labor, but frequently decreases the price to the consumer or patron. In fact, nearly if not all manufactured products are manufactured and sold for less than the same articles were when the manufacturing was done by individual and less concerns. While this is true there are instances in which these so called trusts or companies impose upon the public by charging more for their products than is required for a reasonable profit. The republican party instead of condoning this practice is the only party that has a record of attempting by national legislation to control the trusts. If it is true as he stated that these trusts and corporations are liberal contributors to the republican campaign fund it does not follow that it is because the republican party endorses their illegal peculations. Trusts and corporations are composed of men of good business judgement. They know their business prosperouses only when the people are prosperous and they exercise good business sense when they help to maintain the party whose administration of affairs best serves the interest of the whole people.

Every intelligent farmer, laborer and business man is actuated by the same motive when he goes to the polls and votes the republican ticket.

The pernicious doctrine that every thing in nature tends to the worst or that the world is wholly evil, may be believed by some but it is unnatural for a brilliant mind and genial disposition to believe in such a doctrine, as a rule. That there are evils of all classes in the world no one disputes, but the person who feeds upon that phaze of the conditions continually, soon becomes a pessimist pure and simple. Whether he calls himself a populist, socialist, democrat or republican makes no difference. The Judge admitted that when he was a republican some fifteen years ago, that he and the writer were opposed to corporation influence in politics. We did not believe different from the rank and file of the republican party then, nor does the republican party think or practice different to day. Republican officials some times may, as populist officials have, cater to the dictations of corporations, but even should they, the principles of the republican party are not changed. The republican party has always stood for the interests of the whole people and especially for the producing and laboring class in legislation and in administering the laws of the land.

The history of the country bears out the fact that when the republican party has had the administration of the affairs of the nation that the country has been prosperous. This cannot be said truthfully of any other party. The republican party believes that trusts should be controlled. But the right of capital to organize cannot be questioned no more than the rights of labor. Do not lawyers, doctors, merchants, churches and parties have their organizations for the same purpose as capital? Self-protection and the betterment of the whole people is the legitimate object of all. Yet when any of these organizations impose upon the public they should be dealt with by the government as the nature of their offence demands. The republican party is ready at all times to do this. The republican party has always been the party for the people. It is the party of progress and prosperity, and it has not a drop of pessimist blood in its make-up, nor has it room for any that are so unfortunate to be thus constructed.

Strew Flowers on the Living.

(Written expressly for the Republican.)

To the Editor and readers of the Republican:

During my recent vacation as I stood near the celebrated, "Minnehaha Falls," sometimes referred to as "Laughing Waters" and drank in some of Nature's Studies, for a time I forgot all about the busy cares of the city with its hustle and bustle and as I had a little time for thought and reflection my mind turned for a few brief minutes to how we are wont to strive after money and in the excitement of business forget our duties to one another and how we might lessen the burdens by a little effort on our part in a friendly call imparting to others information that they through force of circumstances are not permitted to see and enjoy the beauties to be found in nature.

Have you not often stood by side of some departed friend or relative and seen flowers piled high over all that is left when the spirit had taken its flight, and did it not occur to you that had these friends displayed a little more of their kind feelings while that departed soul was with them how much better it would have been.

The beautiful flowers, the handiwork of God, are expressive of the most tender of one's emotions, but would it not be better were we to display more of these tokens of sympathy and loving kindness while we have our friends and relatives with us.

As I write these few thoughts I have in mind one whose life is confined to within the four walls of a modest yet neat cottage in a quiet neighborhood in my own city. In my daily trips I am brought in contact with a lady whose severe illness prevents her from indulging in sight-seeing and pleasures that those whose good fortune it is to possess all those God given faculties and above all "health" could they but see the smiling countenance of this party whose untold sufferings are kept within her own breast, they could better know how to appreciate and enjoy life, and would cease to grumble at their condition which even though the possessor of untold riches one is unable to purchase when devoid of "good health."

Miss Miranda Maupin, (the lady to whom I refer) is well known to the readers of the "Republican" is now, and has been for many years an invalid, confined to her home yet possessed of a keen sense of enjoyment of everything that is beautiful, yet unable to travel and enjoy the beauties of nature.

Possessing a fine education, and a close observer, she is an interesting conversationalist, forgetting her own troubles she shares the sorrows and troubles of others with words of encouragement and good cheer. Her life is one which many of us might well emulate.

chance to read these brief thoughts have a picture that might interest her, a book that you could send, or something that would be of interest to one whose misfortune it is to be compelled to stay at home. To any such party I believe I voice Miss Maupin's kindly consideration and appreciativeness for such voluntary gifts and kindly remembrances, and by so doing you will not only be doing yourself a duty but will be contributing something that will help to make another's life worth living. Were I to ask her consent first for this request her reserved manner would perhaps not allow me to offer the suggestion.

Any books, pictures or other articles addressed to 1720 South 8th Street, Omaha, Nebraska, would be duly delivered and appreciated.

With a sincere wish to endeavor to practice more closely in the future the spirit of these suggestions, I remain,

FEMALE WEAKNESS

642 1-2 Congress St. PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.
 I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.
Wilhelmina Snow
 Treasurer, Portland Economic League

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, that is the best reason in the world you should try Wine of Cardui now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness.
