

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The country is to be congratulated on the amount of substantial achievement which has marked the past year both as regards our foreign and as regards our domestic policy.

With a nation as with a man the most important things are those of the household, and therefore the country is especially to be congratulated on what has been accomplished in the direction of providing for the exercise of supervision over the great corporations and combinations of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. The Congress has created a Department of Commerce and Labor, including the Bureau of Corporations, with for the first time authority to secure proper publicity of such proceedings of these great corporations as the public has the right to know. It has provided for the expediting of suits for the enforcement of the federal anti-trust law, and by another law it has secured equal treatment to all producers in the transportation of their goods, thus taking a long stride forward in making effective the work of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The establishment of the Department of Commerce and Labor, with the Bureau of Corporations thereunder, marks a real advance in the direction of doing all that is possible for the solution of the questions vitally affecting capitalists and wage workers. The preliminary work of the Bureau of Corporations in the department has shown the wisdom of its creation. Publicity in corporate affairs will tend to do away with ignorance, and will afford facts upon which intelligent action may be taken.

The Department of Commerce and Labor will be not only a clearing house for information regarding the business transactions of the nation, but the executive arm of the government to aid in strengthening our domestic and foreign markets in perfecting our transportation facilities in building up our merchant marine, in preventing the entrance of undesirable immigrants, in improving commercial and industrial conditions, and in bringing together on common ground those necessary partners in industrial progress—capital and labor.

Capital and Labor.
The consistent policy of the national government, so far as it has the power, is to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or employee; but to refuse to weaken individual initiative or to hamper or cramp the industrial development of the country. We recognize that this is an era of technical and combination, in which great capitalistic corporations and labor unions have become factors of tremendous importance in all industrial centers. Hearty recognition is given the far-reaching, beneficent work which has been accomplished through both corporations and unions, and the line as between different corporations, as between different unions, is drawn as it is between different individuals; that is, it is drawn on conduct, the effort being to treat both organized capital and organized labor alike; asking nothing save that the interest of each shall be brought into harmony with the interest of the general public, and that the result shall conform to the fundamental rules of obedience to law, of individual freedom, and of justice and fair dealing towards all. Whenever either corporation, labor union or individual disregards the law or acts in a spirit of arbitrary and tyrannical interference with the rights of others, whether corporations or individuals, then where the federal government has jurisdiction, it will see to it that the misconduct is stopped, paying not the slightest heed to the position or power of the corporation, the union, or the individual.

We forget that is the question whether or not the conduct of the individual or aggregate of individuals is in accordance with the law of the land. Every man must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor, so long as he does not infringe the rights of others. No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it. Obedience to the law is demanded as a right; not asked as a favor.

Postal Frauds.
I speak in another part of this message of the widespread crimes by which the sacred right of citizenship is falsely asserted and that "inestimable heritage" perverted to base ends. By similar means that is, through frauds, forgeries and perjury, by shameless bribery—the laws relating to postmaster general and postmen have been dishonorably treated; our officers were cordially welcomed by the consular body and the leading merchants, and ordinary business resumed its activity. The government, in its initial carelessness, having to do with the representations of our minister, the official who was regarded as responsible for the disturbed condition of affairs was removed from office, and our claims founded on inequitable treatment of some of our schools and missions appear to be in process of amicable adjustment.

The signing of a new commercial treaty with China, to take place at Shanghai on the 30th of October, is to be ratified. This act, the result of long discussion and negotiation, places our commercial relations with the great Oriental Empire on more stable foundations than ever before, and its adoption will be of great benefit to our trade.

With that is the question whether or not the conduct of the individual or aggregate of individuals is in accordance with the law of the land.

Every man must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor, so long as he does not infringe the rights of others. No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it. Obedience to the law is demanded as a right; not asked as a favor.

Government Finances.
From all sources, exclusive of the postal service, the receipts of the government for the last fiscal year aggregated $560,396,674. The expenditure for the same period were $560,099,007, the surplus for the fiscal year being $54,297,697. The indications are that the surplus for the present fiscal year will be very small, if indeed there be any surplus. From July to November the receipts from customs were, approximately, nine million dollars less than the receipts from the same source for a corresponding portion of last year. Should this decrease continue at the same ratio throughout the fiscal year, the surplus would be reduced by approximately thirty million dollars. Should the decrease continue at the same rate, further decreases during the fiscal year, the surplus would vanish. A large surplus is certainly undesirable. Two years ago the war taxes were taken off with the express intention of equalizing the governmental receipts and expenditures, and though the first year thereafter still showed a surplus, it now seems likely that a substantial equality of revenue and expenditure will be attained. Such being the case, it is of great moment both to exercise care and economy in appropriations, and to scan sharply any change in our fiscal revenue system which may be made. The need of strict economy in our expenditures is emphasized by the fact that we cannot afford to be parsimonious in providing for what is essential to our national well-being. Careful economy wherever possible will alone prevent our income from falling below the point required in order to meet our genuine needs.

The integrity of our currency is beyond question, and under present conditions it would be unwise and unnecessary to attempt a reconstruction of our entire monetary system. The same liberty should be granted the Secretary of the Treasury to deposit custom receipts as is granted him in the deposit of receipts from other sources. In my message of Dec. 2, 1902, I called attention to certain needs of the financial situation, and I again ask the consideration of the Congress for these questions.

Merchant Marine.
A majority of our people desire that steps be taken in the interests of American shipping, so that we may once more resume our former position in the ocean carrying trade. But hitherto the differences of opinion as to the proper method of reaching this end have been so wide that it has proved impossible to secure the adoption of any particular scheme. Having in view these facts, I recommend to the Congress direct the Secretary of the Navy, the Postmaster General and the Secretaries of War and Labor, associated with such a representative group of the Senate and House of Representatives as the Congress in its wisdom may designate, to serve as a commission for the purpose of investigating and reporting to the Congress at its next session what legislation is desirable or necessary for the development of the American merchant marine and American shipping, independently of a national ocean mail-service of adequate auxiliary naval cruisers and marine services. While such a measure is desirable in any event, it is especially desirable at this time, in view of the fact that our present governmental contract for ocean mail with the American Line will expire in 1905. Moreover, lines of cargo ships are of even more importance than fast mail lines; save so far as the latter can be depended upon to furnish swift auxiliary cruisers in time of war.

Immigration.

We cannot have too much immigration of the right kind, and we should have none at all of the wrong kind. The need is to devise some system by which undesirable immigrants shall be kept out entirely, while desirable immigrants are properly distributed throughout the country.

The special investigation of the subject of naturalization under the direction of the Attorney General, and the consequent prosecutions, reveal a condition of affairs calling for the immediate attention of the Congress. Forgeries and perjuries have been perpetrated, not only in the dense centers of population, but throughout the country; and it is established beyond doubt that very many so-called citizens of the United States have no title whatever to that right, and are asserting and enjoying the benefits of citizenship through the mail.

The body politic cannot be sound and healthy if many of its constituent members claim their standing through the prostitution of the high right and calling of citizenship. It should mean something to become a citizen of the United States; and in the process no loophole whatever should be left open to fraud.

In my last annual message in connection with the subject of the due regulation of combinations of capital which are or may become injurious to the public, I recommended a special appropriation for the better enforcement of the anti-trust law as it now stands, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney General. Accordingly the Congress appropriated the sum of five hundred thousand dollars, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney General in the employment of special counsel and agents in the Department of Justice to conduct proceedings and prosecutions under said laws in the courts of the United States. I now recommend, as a matter of the utmost importance and urgency, the extension of the purposes of this appropriation, so that it may be available, under the direction of the Attorney General and until used, for the due enforcement of the laws of the United States in general and especially of the civil and criminal laws relating to public lands and the like, relating to postmaster general offenses and the subject of naturalization. Recent investigations have shown a deplorable state of affairs in these three matters of vital concern.

By various frauds and by forgeries and perjuries, thousands of acres of the public domain, embracing lands of different character and extending through various sections of the country, have been dishonestly acquired. It is hardly necessary to urge the importance of recovering these dishonest acquisitions stolen from the people, and of promptly and duly punishing the offenders.

Relations with Turkey and China.
Early in July, having received intelligence, which happily turned out to be erroneous, of the assassination of our Vice Consul at Beirut, I dispatched a small squadron to that port for such service as might be required. The arrival of the vessels had not been successful, yet the outrage was symptomatic of a state of excitement and disorder which demanded immediate attention. The arrival of the vessels had the effect of quieting the alarm and dispelling the place of the former alarm and disquiet; our officers were cordially welcomed by the consular body and the leading merchants, and ordinary business resumed its activity. The government, in its initial carelessness, having to do with the representations of our minister, the official who was regarded as responsible for the disturbed condition of affairs was removed from office, and our claims founded on inequitable treatment of some of our schools and missions appear to be in process of amicable adjustment.

The signing of a new commercial treaty with China, to take place at Shanghai on the 30th of October, is to be ratified. This act, the result of long discussion and negotiation, places our commercial relations with the great Oriental Empire on more stable foundations than ever before, and its adoption will be of great benefit to our trade.

With that is the question whether or not the conduct of the individual or aggregate of individuals is in accordance with the law of the land.

Every man must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor, so long as he does not infringe the rights of others. No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it. Obedience to the law is demanded as a right; not asked as a favor.

Government Finances.
From all sources, exclusive of the postal service, the receipts of the government for the last fiscal year aggregated $560,396,674. The expenditure for the same period were $560,099,007, the surplus for the fiscal year being $54,297,697. The indications are that the surplus for the present fiscal year will be very small, if indeed there be any surplus. From July to November the receipts from customs were, approximately, nine million dollars less than the receipts from the same source for a corresponding portion of last year. Should this decrease continue at the same ratio throughout the fiscal year, the surplus would be reduced by approximately thirty million dollars. Should the decrease continue at the same rate, further decreases during the fiscal year, the surplus would vanish. A large surplus is certainly undesirable. Two years ago the war taxes were taken off with the express intention of equalizing the governmental receipts and expenditures, and though the first year thereafter still showed a surplus, it now seems likely that a substantial equality of revenue and expenditure will be attained. Such being the case, it is of great moment both to exercise care and economy in appropriations, and to scan sharply any change in our fiscal revenue system which may be made. The need of strict economy in our expenditures is emphasized by the fact that we cannot afford to be parsimonious in providing for what is essential to our national well-being. Careful economy wherever possible will alone prevent our income from falling below the point required in order to meet our genuine needs.

The integrity of our currency is beyond question, and under present conditions it would be unwise and unnecessary to attempt a reconstruction of our entire monetary system. The same liberty should be granted the Secretary of the Treasury to deposit custom receipts as is granted him in the deposit of receipts from other sources. In my message of Dec. 2, 1902, I called attention to certain needs of the financial situation, and I again ask the consideration of the Congress for these questions.

Merchant Marine.
A majority of our people desire that steps be taken in the interests of American shipping, so that we may once more resume our former position in the ocean carrying trade. But hitherto the differences of opinion as to the proper method of reaching this end have been so wide that it has proved impossible to secure the adoption of any particular scheme.

Having in view these facts, I recommend to the Congress direct the Secretary of the Navy, the Postmaster General and the Secretaries of War and Labor, associated with such a representative group of the Senate and House of Representatives as the Congress in its wisdom may designate, to serve as a commission for the purpose of investigating and reporting to the Congress at its next session what legislation is desirable or necessary for the development of the American merchant marine and American shipping, independently of a national ocean mail-service of adequate auxiliary naval cruisers and marine services.

While such a measure is desirable in any event, it is especially desirable at this time, in view of the fact that our present governmental contract for ocean mail with the American Line will expire in 1905. Moreover, lines of cargo ships are of even more importance than fast mail lines; save so far as the latter can be depended upon to furnish swift auxiliary cruisers in time of war.

Immigration.

We cannot have too much immigration of the right kind, and we should have none at all of the wrong kind. The need is to devise some system by which undesirable immigrants shall be kept out entirely, while desirable immigrants are properly distributed throughout the country.

The special investigation of the subject of naturalization under the direction of the Attorney General, and the consequent prosecutions, reveal a condition of affairs calling for the immediate attention of the Congress. Forgeries and perjuries have been perpetrated, not only in the dense centers of population, but throughout the country; and it is established beyond doubt that very many so-called citizens of the United States have no title whatever to that right, and are asserting and enjoying the benefits of citizenship through the mail.

The body politic cannot be sound and healthy if many of its constituent members claim their standing through the prostitution of the high right and calling of citizenship. It should mean something to become a citizen of the United States; and in the process no loophole whatever should be left open to fraud.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for the peace of the continent.

The work of reclamation of the arid lands of the West is progressing steadily and satisfactorily under the terms of the Homestead Act, and the proceeds of two of her ports to be applied to the payment of whatever obligations might be ascertained by mixed commissions appointed for that purpose to be due from the Government of Venezuela to the people of the continent. Under this agreement Venezuela agreed to set aside certain lands in the ports of her ports of entry to be held by the Government of Venezuela for agriculture in its broadest sense, and to whatever extent they may be reclaimed under the national irrigation law, the public lands should be held by the Government of Venezuela for