A Lazy Man.

On a hot summer's day a gentleman who was waiting for his train at one of our country stations asked a porter who was lying on one of the seats where the station master lived, and the porter, not moving, lazily pointed to the house with his foot.

The gentleman, very much struck at the man's laziness, said, "If you can show me a lazier action than that, my good man, I'll give you two and sixpence."

The porter, not moving an inch, replied, "Put it in my pocket, gu'nor."—London News.

Definite Information.

"How much are these Scotch flannels, please?" asked a woman in one of the large department stores one day last week.

"This lady will show them to you," airily replied the clerk, indicating with an indifferent nod a girl about three feet distant.

"But," persisted the woman, "I don't want to buy now. I simply want to know how much they are."

"Oh, different prices and up," was the conchallant answer.—New York Times.

"By the behavior of my heirs."—Paris Gaulois.

SWISS AS MILITARY MEN.

Strict Government Conditions Make Their Army a Superb War Machine.

Every year the Swiss soldier must do a certain amount of rifle practice in order to keep his marksmanship up to a high standard. He is allowed to choose his own time and place for this practice, but under strict government conditions. The Swiss army last year was composed of a total of 284,000 fighting men. A French military authority holds that "this army, in case of war upon its territory, need not fear any army which can be named." An English officer who witnessed its maneuvers two years ago wrote to the London Times that "of the Swiss army as a war machine it is impossible to speak in terms other than those which, to anyone who has not seen its performance, must appear too laudatory." The National Review contrasts the Swiss military organization with the British volunteer system and very much to the disadvantage of the latter: "Our men," says the writer, "are ill-trained in shooting and often armed with defective or discarded weapons. The Swiss have thoroughly modern arms and are probably the best shots in Europe. The Swiss system of mobilization is perhaps the most effective in the world." The Swiss have always been a fighting nation and the power which should attempt to annex them against their will would engage in a tremendous undertaking.

BELIEVE IN SOOTHSAYERS.

Many Women of Various Classes Are Regular Patrons of the Clairvoyants.

The writer recently called upon half a dozen professional palmists and clairvoyants and gathered in the course of the interviews some very startling facts concerning the clients who consult these ladies, says the New York Telegram.

"Every unmarried woman," said one clairvoyant to me, "asks the same question, namely, 'When shall I marry?'—a patently absurd question. Others, again, while not going quite so far, would like to know the initials of their future husband, whether he will be dark or fair, and so on.

"Some people's notions of the power of palmistry," declared another lady, "are wildly vague. For instance, a gentleman called here the other day who had lost $100, and he asked me where it could be found."

Fashionable authors are prone to inquire if their new books will go well, and one of our best known actors invariably consults a palmist in order to learn whether he will be successful in a new role.

Men, I learn, are quite as superstitious as women, and some even more so. Stockbrokers come in large numbers to consult one fashionable clairvoyant, and to another flock betting men, in order that the crystal globe may be consulted as to the success of a horse who may be carrying their money.

WOMEN HAVE DECORATION.

Forty-One of Them Have Received the Ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

According to a chart in the Palais des Femmes at the Paris exposition—the women's palace—the number of women who have received the ribbon of the Legion of Honor is not large—some 41 in all. Sarah Bernhardt is the latest name to be recommended for this honor, and this is the first time, it is understood, that an actress has been nominated. Of the 41, 31 had been decorated for special services in connection with hospital or ambulance work, one was an artist, one an archaeologist and three were rewarded for heroism in war. Rosa Bonheur was the artist, and she received the distinction in 1855 as a result of the award by the jury of the grand prix for her picture, "The Horse Fair," now known far and wide. The emperor did not approve of the Legion of Honor being conferred upon a woman, and it was not till 1855—12 years after—that she actually received it. In 1894 she became an officer of the order. Juliette Dodu, who was condemned to be shot by the Germans during the Franco-Prussian war for refusing to telegraph a message, was another. She was released by the order of Prince Frederick Charles, to receive both the cross of the legion and the military medal.

FOOD FOR THE FAMISHED.

Island in Torres Strait Where Stores Are Left for Distressed Sailors.

"Did you ever hear of the old ocean storehouse in Torres Strait?" asked the old seaman, relates the Washington Star. "It's called Deliverance Island, though it is sometimes marked on the charts as Berby Island. It is like a mound rising out of the ocean, the highest point being about 50 feet. It is well-nigh barren, having only a few bushes and shrubs. On one side is a sandy beach, on the other a fissure forming a sort of cave, in which stores are left by men-of-war and merchant vessels passing through for the relief of distressed and shipwrecked sailors. I went in there last year from the Enterprise, an American bark.

"During a calm, we lowered a boat and pulled. In this cave we found tins of preserved meat, biscuits, tobacco and a wooden box marked 'post office.' Our skipper, Capt. Samuel, wrote a letter to a friend of his in Boston. It reached him, too. Deliverance Island that day belonged to the French, but we took down their flag and hoisted the stars and stripes. That is the custom—the last ship through the straits hoists its flag on this ocean storehouse and post office."

E. B. DRAKE.

During a calm, we lowered a boat and pulled. In this cave we found tins of preserved meat, biscuits, tobacco and a wooden box marked 'post office.' Our skipper, Capt. Samuel, wrote a letter to a friend of his in Boston. It reached him, too. Deliverance Island that day belonged to the French, but we took down their flag and hoisted the stars and stripes. That is the custom—the last ship through the straits hoists its flag on this ocean storehouse and post office."
