The Sugar Beet's New Role.

It remained for Nelson Morris, the millionaire Chicago packer, to point out a new use to which the sugar beet may be put. Used as food for hogs, Mr. Morris declares the beet vastly improves the quality of the meat. In fact the sugar beet fed hog produces the finest cuts.

This opens up a new industry

J. G. BREDIER, Breeder of

Here Scotch and Scotch Topped Short Horn Cattle. My herd numbers 40 cows. Will compare in breeding and quality with any west of Chicago. My experience has taught me that to give good satisfaction, breeding cattle must be raised in this climate. I expect to raise them here the equine of anything raised in the U. S. I now have 25 bulls suitable for this, and next year's service. My cows weigh from 1400 to 2000 pounds. Come and see these.

for Colorado and Nebraska, and Wyoming especially, the three states in which beet culture has advanced most rapidly. With vast acreages of the vegetables and freight rates under the prevailing system which permit of easy access to the markets, the beet fed hog from this section easily may drive out its porcine competitors from the other states.

"There is a great future ahead for the beet fed hog," said Mr. Morris a few days ago in Denver. "Alfalfa, field peas and sugar beets, all of which are grown in great quantities in Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming, make the finest food for hogs. Of the three, however, I think the sugar beet produces by far the best meat. This opens up a new industry for this section of the west."

Thus the sugar cured ham must surrender to the sugar beet hog. Make way for him.

Judge Letton's Acceptance.
"Gentlemen of the Convention: I am not in any temper of mind at the present time, or have the power of voice to make speech. I am not an orator at any time. I want to say I thank you from the bottom of my heart for this nomination. I think no higher honor can be paid to a citizen of your state than to be nominated for the office of justice of the supreme court. That court carries with it the power of life and death, the disposition of the property of any man in the state, and it is the most responsible position that can be tendered or given to any man in the state. I appreciate the responsibility of this position.

I want to say, too, that if elected, which I expect to be, I shall know neither rich or poor, neither corporation or individual (great applause and cheering) and that so far as in me lies, I will dispense justice with even hand to every man within the borders of the state. (Applause.) I am told that your committee on resolutions will report to this convention, declaring against the issuance of free transportation by the railroads in this state. I want to say to you that I am in hearty accord with that declaration. (Great applause.)

Further, I understand that they have endorsed our president, and I stand firmly with them on that proposition. (Applause.)

Further, I understand they will report in favor of a direct primary. The closer you get to the people the better for the interests of all. (Applause.)

I wish to thank the convention for this nomination; I want to thank my friends who made the magnificent fight upon this convention floor for me. I thank you all, gentlemen. (Long and continued applause.)

Dead Letter List.
For week ending September 29, 1905:
R. P. Maddix, Clara Sternes.

Lincoln, Sept. 25.
The republican campaign in Nebraska never started out under such favorable conditions as it does this year. The character of the candidates and the manner of their nomination has already brought forth such a unanimous expression of approval from the press of the state that an unusual majority for the ticket is already assured.

In the state platform the features which have attracted most attention are the demands for the direct primary and the demand for a law abolishing the free pass. Behind them both looms up the great issue which is the regulation of corporations and the establishment of equitable freight rates. The rank and file of the republican party have concluded that this issue can only be successfully handled by getting the nominations of officials closer to the people, and by putting out of business the great pass club which has long been the efficient weapon of the corporations.

This assures a tremendous contest next year, in the nomination of state and legislative candidates, and work on this is already begun. In most counties there is a disposition to closely scan and publish the records of the present members of the legislature on the questions which have been covered by the state platform, before any renominations are considered. This is a wise precaution when the unsatisfactory and unpopular record made by the last session is remembered.

At a recent meeting of the state committee a resolution was introduced calling for the establishment of the direct primary next year for the nomination of the state ticket. This meant the abolishment of state conventions and was in line with the state platform. The question went over to the next meeting of the state committee in order that the members might learn the wishes of their constituents.

It is well known that the corporations will oppose one feature of the direct primary of next year, and that one at least of the state officials is against its establishment until a general primary law is adopted. It is also conceded that behind the movement on the part of some is a desire to keep the selection of the next U. S. senator out of a state convention and throw it into the legislature. The general opinion is that any direct primary plan for next year which does not also include the nomination of U. S. senator will be incomplete and will defeat one of the greatest reforms ever established in Nebraska politics—the popular selection of the senatorial candidate.
