On last Thursday forenoon Maudie Rhodes, had her left hand nearly torn off at the wrist while playing around the separator. In some way the hand was caught by the wheel and drawn in between the wheel and wheel where the space is not more than a half inch wide. Mr. Rhodes had to be called from the field before the hand could be removed, and then the task was performed with much difficulty. Drs. Hanna and Young were called, but after administering chloroform, and closely examining it, found it necessary to take her to the hospital at Broken Bow. Jack McCall died at his home in Lexington, Monday of last week. He was one of the early pioneers of Dawson county, and was twice a candidate for governor of Nebraska. The first time he was defeated in convention by T. J. Majors. Ten years ago he was the republican nominee for governor but failed of election as Bryanism swept the state. He bore the reputation of being a courteous gentleman, a generous friend. He had accumulated large property interests, but unless of recent date was never married. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, was a Knight Templar and a member of the Shrine. His funeral was held last Thursday.

William Cosner, of Merna, died last Saturday night about 11 o'clock from old age. He had been in poor health for three weeks previous, but at no time suffered pain. He was in his 84th year. His funeral was held Monday in the Baptist church at that place where a large crowd gathered to pay their last tribute to Grandpa Cosner, as he was familiarly known. The esteem for him was so great that all the business houses of the town closed during the hour of his funeral.

Few men in the private ranks ever enjoyed more universal esteem than did Grandpa Cosner. He was a loyal citizen, a generous neighbor, a faithful husband, a loving father and devout Christian. He leaves his aged wife, children and grand children to mourn his death.

Last Friday morning the startling news reached Mason that Mrs. Morford's two and a half year old baby was lost. He had strayed away the evening before, and although the family and the neighbors had been searching all night, he had not been found. As soon as possible a company of men and boys started from town to join the search. The little fellow had been traced a short distance from the house by the stick "horse" he was riding. With J. L. Smith as captain a line of about seventy-five men searched every foot of the ground about the place, and at about 3:00 in the afternoon the little fellow was found lying face downward on the side hill about 1 1/4 miles from home. It had been raining constantly since early in the night and he was drenched and shaking with cold. He was wrapped up and carried to his almost frantic mother, alive and able to talk. At present he seems to be none the worse for missing three meals and spending twenty hours in a cold and drizzling rain out in the hills.—Mason City item in The Argosy.

After visiting here a short time he will return to St. Louis.

Later the assembled guests partook of a bountiful repast of the good things which Custer county housewives know how to prepare. The young people received from various friends a number of appropriate presents both beautiful and useful. The bride is a sister of Miss Emma Bennett of this city.
