"Friend, Sweetheart, wife."

Was the beautiful sentiment chosen by a well known young man, to be inscribed within the fine 'cee's' ring. Friend, sweetheart, wife—combine the three, or choose one from among them and I will show you the ring for presentation. Dainty solitaires for the woman who is satisfied with nothing but the "correct thing."

An elegant line of seals and initials for the men, solid, substantial, economical rings for the boys and girls. "Everybody's" ring, the solid gold oval or band, in all sizes; broad flat, broad full oval, or the neat, refined Tiffany, a narrow, thick ring, weighing fully as much as the others, but lacking their ostentation.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

Two weeks ago the REPUBLICAN published an item to the effect that "The officials of the pension office think they have discovered in Lyston D. Howe, of Streator, Ill., the youngest volunteer of the civil war. He enlisted in 1861, when only ten years and nine months old."

To this statement Comrade J. J. Douglas of Callaway, takes exceptions and writes as follows:

"Now, this question was argued pro and con in the Chicago Inter Ocean a few years ago, and I think, was finally decided in favor of my friend, Gilbert VanZandt, of my neighborhood in Ohio, and as I was acquainted with "Gib," as he was called, I write this in his defense, thinking it may be of interest to some, and especially to the old soldiers. He was ten years, seven months and sixteen days old when he enlisted August 6th, 1862, in Co. D, 79th Ohio Volunteers, in the little village of Port William, Clinton county, Ohio. He enlisted as a drummer boy. His discharge at the close of the war describes him as "a soldier 13 years old and four feet high." He has documentary proofs to show his age, the time of his enlistment and discharge, and interesting letters that tell what he did as a soldier. He is now living with his widowed mother in Kansas City, and is a member of the Faragut-Thomas Post G. A. R. of that place. He still has the old battered drum he carried when he enlisted. He also has an old sword that was given him while in the army. He served as dispatch carrier in the Atlantic campaign from Atlanta to the sea, winding up at Washington. He was in all the engagements his division fought in. He was in the grand parade in Washington at the close of the war and there he met Andrew Johnson, president of the United States. He was riding a beautiful pony he captured in Georgia and as all such property belonged to the government, he was supposed to give the pony up, but says he went personally to the president to ask to be allowed to retain it. He took an interest in the boy and asked him many questions, and wanted to know which he cared more for, the pony or a commission. He said the pony, and it was given him, with transportation for it to his home in Ohio. He kept it till it died, which was several years after the war."

serve that time, for he was drawing his salary as Senator. The law provides that a Congressman shall be paid from the time his predecessor's resignation was made, and thus Representative Pollard is clearly entitled to the money. However, the fact that he accepted the cash without having actually earned it was used against him in the campaign, but immediately after election he returned the money in order to convince the voters of his good intentions. But what is the government going to do with the money? The problem is turning gray the hair of certain government officials and officers of the House of Representatives.

Knight Errant of Tariff Reform.

Whether Mr. Bryan talks about the Tariff or keeps quiet on that matter the record is made, and if things so turn as to make him again the Democratic presidential nominee the country must once more face squarely the determination by the Democratic party to overturn the existing economic advantages in the form of the marvelous industrial development of the county, the unparalleled growth of our foreign trade and the general prosperity of the people. In all probability the fight will turn chiefly on that issue in any event, but it will be additionally fierce with Mr. Bryan as the Democratic standard bearer, for in his party's frantic efforts to have the country forget his cheap currency championships it will redouble its zeal to prove him a knight errant of "Tariff reform."

Mason City.

George Shaw, who was taken suddenly ill while at the show at the Opera house last Saturday night, is now on the highway to recovery.

James Kelly returned Saturday morning from Sioux county, Neb., where he'd been looking at land. He was well pleased with the country and took a half section homestead while there.

Will Scharper returned Friday from Grand Island where he has been attending the Baptist college. He expects to return to school work after the holidays.

William Longmore and wife, of Callaway, have been visiting relatives in this vicinity the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph who have been visiting friends and relatives in this vicinity, returned to their home in St. Joseph Tuesday.

Corn husking is on in full blast. Nearly all farmers, near Mason, began husking this week.

While breaking a broncho Ed. Gill had the misfortune to have it fall upon him, making him pretty sore for a few days.

J. R. Lamb is doing the mason act nowadays. He built a chimney Tuesday.

Advent Church.
 There will be Gospel services at the Advent church, in the southeast part of the city next Sunday, November 18, at 11 a. m. ELDER HAYCRAFT, PASTOR.
