CUSTER COUNTY HERD OF DUROC JERSEYS

The leading strains of Duroc blood flows through our herd. We have some choice spring boars, tops of our crop of spring pigs. They are lengthy, heavy-bone fellows—good enough for head-headers and the very best for feeding purposes—for sale at very low prices.

We have four boars sired by Ohio Chief, the great hog. One-third interest in him sold for $2,000.00. Their dam we purchased for $245.00 last February.

Pedigree with every animal sold. We guarantee satisfaction.

NOTE—We have decided to not hold a public sale this fall.

Come and see our herd—8 miles west of Broken Bow, Nebr.

J.G. BRENER, Breeder of

Pure Scotch and Scotch Topped Short Horn Cattle. My herd numbers 40 cows. Will compare in breeding and quality with any west of Chicago. My experience has taught me that to give good satisfaction, breeding cattle must be raised in this latitude. I expect to raise in the U. S. I now have the equal of anything for this and next year's service. My cows weigh from 1400 to 2000 pounds. Come and see 'em.

THOUGHT IT TIME TO STOP.

Wonders of the Telephone Too Much for Sitting Bull.

C. J. H. Woodbury, the engineering expert of the telephone company, told the boot and shoe men the other night the true version of the Sitting Bull and telephone story, says the Boston Herald. Sitting Bull had been captured by the United States troops and was held in close confinement. So also was another obstreperous Indian, held in confinement at a post about 100 miles away. The officer in charge of Sitting Bull had been chasing the Indians for two months, and was wondering what he would do with the captive. In an inspired moment he decided to arrange an interview between the two Indians over the telephone. After the necessary ringing up Sitting Bull was asked if he cared to talk into the machine. He talked into it for several minutes and did a heap of listening also.

He put down the instrument finally, and for hours was even more gloomy than usual, at last beginning to talk to himself, something very rare for the Indian. Asked if he was dissatisfied with his accommodations or if there was anything they could do for him he broke forth at last:

"No, I'm finished. It's all right when the white man's plaything talks the white man's language; but when it learns to talk the red man's tongue it's time to stop."

It is believed in the west, where the incident is fairly well known, that this talk over the telephone between the two Indians had a considerable influence in shortening the Indian wars.

BULLFROGS AND THE FASHION.

If the Frog a-Wooling Goes, Let Him Look Out for His Skin.

The bullfrog has hopped into fashion. Bullfrog skin in its natural color, and also dyed, is not only employed for belts, pocketbooks, card cases and chateaux bags, but is used for vests, cuffs and collars, and many a clever girl will wear this autumn a bullfrog skin hat.

It may not sound attractive, says the Woman's Home Companion, but a little turban of bullfrog skin in a greenish brown shade, with upstanding loops of dark green velvet ribbon for its trimming, makes a very smart hat.

A bullfrog skin hat is being made up for a New York girl, who plans when she wears it to carry an umbrella of greenish brown skin, with a very realistic looking bullfrog forming the top of the handle. In looking for distinctive details to add to one's toilet the bullfrog umbrella must not be overlooked.

A Turkish Millionaire.

Mouammer Bey, son of the richest man in all Turkey, who will be heir to more millions than any other person in the Ottoman empire, says the heir of the sultan, is in Boston on business, and before he leaves the business men will have something like a cool half million of his money, while he will have tons of Boston's most improved shoe and cotton machinery.

There is nothing about the sleek appearing man of 35 years, with his rotund figure, to indicate that he is to be at some time in the future the richest man in his native land. He is just as democratic as any of this country's wealthy men, and one wouldn't have to make a very big stretch of imagination to pick him out as an American.

Muammer Bey, unlike most of his fellow countrymen, is highly educated, and instead of wasting his father's vast wealth by riotous living, he has mastered the many great industries that his father controls, and is adding to the fortune. Those who have come in contact with him say that he is as keen as the proverbial Yankee man.

Poltiness Pays.

"Poltiness," said Senator Gallinger, in the hope of stilling a rather acrimonious argument in Concord, "always pays."

His flushed listeners looked up at him in inquiry and he smiled and repeated.

"Poltiness always pays. Two little girls I know were set before a plate containing two bunches of grapes—one a very large and tempting and perfect bunch, the other small and hard and green. The two little girls looked at the two bunches for a space in silence. Then the poltite child said:

"Is oo gweedy?"

"No," the other answered; "I see not a bit gweedy."

"Then," said the first, "oo choose."

Ring Tells Profession in Brazil.

"One of the conveniences of Brazil is the ease with which you can tell the particular line of business a professional man is in," remarked A. V. Nesbitt, who recently returned from a long stay in Brazil.

"At graduation each professional graduate is given a ring with a certain kind of stone for his particular profession. For instance, an engineer will have a turquoise, a doctor an amethyst, and so on. If you know the ring that belongs to each profession you don't have to ask a man his profession, but just glance at the ring he wears."

Chicken's Long Fast.

A New Orleans man has proved that a chicken can live 23 days without food or water. He makes affidavit that when his family moved recently a chicken securely nailed in a box was in the cellar of the new house, having been forgotten by the former tenants. Twenty-three days later the cook was moved to explore the cellar and discovered the chicken, emaciated, but still much alive.

SPIDER BOUND ITS CAPTIVE.

Mad Fly Safely Tied Up Before Attacking It.

"One morning, when busy in my workshop," says a naturalist, "a large fly, double the size of a bluebottle, was caught in a spider's web in the window close to where I was at work. It was held by two of its legs only, and for some time the spider, which was about the size of the fly's head, proceeded to strengthen its hold by attaching numerous extra lines to the two captive limbs, carefully keeping out of reach of the others, which were letting out in all directions in frantic efforts to escape.

"During a short respite in the captive's struggles the spider cautiously approached, and with its hind legs got several turns of its tiny rope round one of the limbs that were free. These tactics were carried on till all the legs were firmly bound. It then injected poison into one of the legs. This soon showed itself, for its deadening effects reduced the victim's struggles in a marked degree. The poison paralyzes but does not kill.

"Shortly after a second bite resistance ceased, and the victor settled down to suck the juices of its fallen prey. The struggles lasted quite an hour. Next morning the fly was alive, and the spider was still sucking out its life blood."

DOG PROVED ITSELF HERO.

Gave Up Life in Attempt to Stop Runaway Team.

Near Pittsford a dog was killed in a determined and intelligent effort to stop a runaway team. Conrad Hoenick, a farmer, left his team standing near a railroad track. Two little boys were in the wagon. The horses were frightened by a passing train and ran away with the lads. One of the boys was thrown out and severely injured. The other remained in the wagon, and while the speed of the frightened team increased every second he made frantic efforts to reach the lines and stop them.

As the horses passed Frank Tousey's place the latter's dog, which carried the mail and did many little tasks about the farm and had almost human intelligence, ran out, and seeing the predicament of the boy, attempted to catch hold of the dangling lines. Like a human being the animal, without a sound, ranged himself into line to seize the reins, and in his anxiety to do so, was struck by the wheel and instantly killed. The boy managed to get hold of one rein, and with it he turned the horses and stopped them.—Warren Mirror.

What Makes the Heart Weak.

Two important causes of heart trouble are underwork and overwork, but chiefly underwork, says Outing. Where due to overwork it has been physical, not mental. The hearts of long-distance runners and bicyclists sometimes become hypertrophied, while hearts of children sometimes succumb to too arduous play. With children, however, it is usually due to a predisposition in that direction from their parents, whose hearts have been weakened by prolonged under exercise rather than to overexercise on their part.

As the result of a recent examination of nearly 10,000 school children in the primary grades by the board of health, it was found that 50 per cent were suffering from physical defects, among which predominated defective vision, insufficient nutrition, pulmonary and heart ailments—a startling condition of our boasted civilization.

He Paid for All.

The English custom of free seats and collection plates in church is puzzling the continental visitors. In Roman Catholic countries it is usual to make a small payment on entering a church. A Frenchman on a visit to Manchester not long ago, according to the Guardian, attended service in one of the parish churches. With him was a party of English friends. The foreigner was seated at the outer end of the pew. The plate came round in due course, and the visitor was the first to deposit a coin in it. The collector was about to pass the plate to his English friends when the Frenchman interposed: "Ah, no, I have paid for all the seats."

Mistaken Signals.

The near-sighted man waved his handkerchief violently in the direction of an eighth-story window.

"What did you do that for?" asked his friend, who was not near sighted.

"That's where Flossie lives," shouted the near-sighted man. "She's waving at me."

"What you see in that eighth-story window," explained the man who was not near sighted, "is a boy sitting outside the window pane cleaning it off with a large white rag."

Spelling Reform at Yale.

William Beebe, professor of mathematics in the college, approves and says:

"As an example of spelling that needs reform this from an academic man applying for a change in an elective course is applicable:

"The course is so hard that I cannot due it justice, and I ask permission to omit it."—Yale Alumni Weekly.

Where Everybody Does It.

"Did you ever see a man walk in his sleep?"

"Lots of them; and heard them talk at the same time. I stopped off in Philadelphia three or four days once."—Kansas City Drivers' Telegram.

READY TO TAKE NOTES.

Cruel Husband Had Stenographer to Record Wife's Remarks.

Frederic Irland, at the last convention of the National Association of Stenographers at Atlantic City, said of a somewhat harsh rebuke that one stenographer had administered to another:

"That rebuke was a little too cruel, was it not? It reminds me of the cruelty of a Washington man—a piece of cruelty wherein stenography played an unwitting part.

"As this man came to bed one night his wife said to him:

"Has the stranger gone; I didn't hear him."

"Oh, no, dear. He hasn't gone," the husband replied. "I have instructed the maid to let him out in three or four hours."

"The wife looked amazed and stupefied.

"What—why—who on earth is he, anyway?" she stammered.

"My dear," said the husband, quietly, "he is a shorthand reporter. You see, I nearly always forget what you say to me during your discourse from 11 till two and sometimes I go to sleep while you're talking. So I thought I'd have your lecture written out to-night, and study it at my leisure. The young man is all ready, the door is open so that he can hear you, and you may begin as soon as you like."

TURNED ON THE REFEREE.

Turtles Objected to His Interruption of Their Fight.

Milton J. Vreeland, a farmer living near Pine Brook, N. J., was nearly drowned in the Passaic river yesterday as the result of his acting as referee between two snapping turtles, says the New York World. Vreeland, who was in a canoe, watched the bout for a minute or two and then decided that it was time for the combatants to break away.

He paddled up to them, reached over the side, caught them by the tails, one in each hand, and swung them into the canoe—one in the bow, the other in the stern of the frail craft. But the turtles did not accept this decision. They wanted to fight on, and being unable to get at each other they attacked the self-appointed referee.

The farmer had found it an easy matter to catch hold of the turtles' tails when they were in the water, but it was impossible now with the canoe to keep on an even keel. He caught up the paddle and with this managed to beat off his assailants for awhile, but at last the canoe capsized. As it did so one of the turtles dealt the farmer a blow in the back just below the belt. It clung to the place on the trousers where it had snapped and Vreeland found he could not swim.

He says himself he would have gone to the bottom but for Frank Jacobus, who turned a bend in the river in a canoe and towed man and turtles ashore.

Foolish Dietetic Fads.

"If men grimly eat to live, they will not live long," says Dr. Thomas Lathrop Stedman, in a protest against the desperate seriousness with which the present generation regards its food. Dr. Stedman suggests that people should eat what they like. "Appetite," he says, "is as necessary to digestion as is mastication, and what is eaten without relish is with difficulty, if at all, assimilated, for the stomach despises unsavory stuff and refuses to secrete sufficient fluid for its digestion."

The dietetic crank, he adds, is saved from the otherwise inevitable results of his folly by the fact that his enthusiastic appreciation of the unsavory food which he is persuaded will assure him strength and long life gives him a taste for it, and so the motherly stomach provides an abundance of gastric juice of the proper composition.

Earth Becoming a Desert.

That the earth is becoming a desert and that it is only a matter of time when it will be a desolate waste, was the statement made by Prof. Lowell in a lecture before the Lowell Institute at the Massachusetts Institute of technology.

The water contained by the earth is passing gradually off into inter-stellar space, and the great deserts such as the Sahara and those in Arizona are increasing in size much more rapidly than most people think.

According to Prof. Lowell, what were once well populated valleys in the region of the Sahara, is now a dry, sandy waste. In Mars similar changes have been taking place, and the planet is now about three-eighths desert.—Boston Globe.

Question and Answer.

When Nathan M. Morse was trying the Tuckerman will case before Judge McKim, at Boston, Dr. Jelly, the well-known expert on insanity, was one of the witnesses. One of the hypothetical questions asked of the witness by Mr. Morse contained no less than 20,000 words. The lawyer started this pithy question at the opening of court and closed only a few minutes prior to the noon adjournment. The point that Mr. Morse was endeavoring to bring out related to the mental condition of the testator when he made his will.

This is said to have been the longest single interrogation ever made in a court of law, and the answer comprised just three words, "I do not."

The Cynic Again.

We always dislike a man who has grasped an opportunity we failed to see. When we say of a man that he won't listen to reason he is probably saying the same of us.—The Tatler.
