Ancient Echoes or, Whose Fault Was It?

west with his followers and settling at Salt Lake, Utah territory. They have evacuated their partially erected Temple at Nauvoo, Ill., the ruins of which still stands.

But nothing could draw the attention of the public from the slavery question. Lyceums sprang up over all the North, every school house and many private dwelling became a place of public gatherings where the questions of the day were discussed from every standpoint. The fugitive slave law was shredded, torn to atoms, reviled, trampled under foot, and rejected as far as mortal tongue could accomplish the work. The underground rail-road was running full force and but few slaves who succeeded in crossing the Ohio river but what eventually gained the promised land beyond the lakes. But stop! What fascinating, bewitching, story is this that is enchanting the whole nation. See how eagerly it is perused by old and young, high and low, rich and poor, black and white, male and female, their hearts all going out in sympathy for the suffering pictured in that tale of woe.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe had at one leap, sprang from obscurity to the very pinnacle of literary fame, in giving to the public, "Uncle Tom's Cabin, or Life Among the Lowly." The advocates of slavery scoffed at the picture drawn, denying that such cruelty was ever practiced on a Southern slave, but escaped and fleeing negroes told a different tale, and as proof of the truth of their assertion often bareing their backs to show the marks of the cruel lash that time could not erase. To counteract the mighty wave of indignation that went sweeping through the North Caroline Le-Hense put out a volume in answer to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" entitled "The Long Moss Spring," which I had the pleasure of perusing and I must say that it was the most fascinating story of southern life that ever fell to my lot to read, but few copies sold in the north, however, and the ill feeling between the two sections was kept at white heat.

1852 another presidential election in which the question of slavery takes a leading part. The democrat convention pledged itself to a strict enforcement of the fugitive slave law, and denounced as criminal all agitation of the slavery question. They nominated Pierce and King. The Whig candidates were Scott and Graham, the free soilers put forward, Hale and Julian, Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, the two leaders of the Whig party was stricken by death and their mantles fell upon the shoulders of Charles Sumner, William Sewart and Salmon P. Chase who became the leaders of their party. J. C. Calhoun, leader of the democrats, was also called and was succeeded by Jefferson Davis. In this election the old Whig party received its death blow. It was so overwhelmingly defeated that it never recovered. But the slave party was in a quandry what course to pursue for although it had elected its president by an overpowering number, it had lost its prestige in the senate through the acquisition of California.

Now to even up matters, the state right party sends William Walker a voted filibuster into Sonora, Mexico, hoping to succeed in wresting that state from southern neighbor as Sam Houston had done with Texas. He failed, however, in his undertaking and sailed with his expedition to Nicaragua. Here he succeeded for a time but was forced to retreat. He made two or three other attempts to capture it but was finally driven out. He was then sent to Honduras, where he was captured and shot.

Although a piratical scheme, he can be counted as a martyr to the southern greed for power. But the blame cannot all be placed on the south, for meetings were held in New York and many other large cities of the north and his efforts to bring one of these states into the Union as a state was applauded everywhere by the state sovereignty party. Having failed in their attempt as revolutionists, President Peirce now took upon himself the solution of the question. He proposed the buying of Cuba from Spain. Our ministers to England, France and Spain were called together at Omstead to consult over the annexation of Cuba. They drew up what was called the Omstead manifesto. It declared that Cuba was necessary to the United States, and it was the duty of this country to prevent the emancipation of its slaves. Also, if Spain refused to sell to the United States we would be justified in taking it by force. Now, had the state sovereignty party tried that scheme as they had heretofore done, they would have escaped a great portion of the anathema of the free soilers, but when the president of the United States, chosen to represent the whole people, stepped down from his high calling and joined a piratical scheme to rob another country of her possessions, it is no wonder the fire of indignation went sweeping through the north like a whirlwind. The people of that day understood that its accomplishment was not to further the interests of the United States, but to build up and strengthen the waning power of the slavery party.

But the president soon realized that, like the fugitive slave law, this move was about to prove a boomerang and so dropped it.

Another plan was resorted to. It was the division of Texas into two or three states. But this Texas positively refused to do.

In District Court of Custer County, Nebraska.

Wilhelmine C. Ahrendt, Plaintiff,

The Lombard Investment Company, a corporation, and Mrs. Ellen A. Stevens, Defendants.

The Lombard Investment Company, a corporation, and Mrs. Ellen A. Stevens, will take notice that on the 24th day of June, 1907, Wilhelmine C. Ahrendt, plaintiff herein, filed her petition in the District Court of Custer County, Nebraska, against the Lombard Investment Company, a corporation, and Mrs. Ellen A. Stevens, to secure the sum of $250.00 due and payable February 1st, 1894, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, evidenced by 10 interest notes, the first of which was in the sum of $25.00 and each remaining one in the sum of $19.50 and duly recorded on the 13th day of February, 1899, in book 26, on page 477, of the mortgage records of said Custer county, be cancelled and discharged of record, and that the cloud on the title of said real estate by reason of said mortgage be removed, for the reason that plaintiff is the owner in fee simple to said real estate and more than ten years have elapsed since the due date of said mortgage and of each and all sums secured thereby and that said mortgage and all interest thereon has been paid in full and for such other and further relief as may be just and equitable.

You are required to answer said petition on or before the 5th day of August, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the County Clerk's office in Broken Bow, Nebraska.
