Brother.
One day the doctor went out to the tree. The brother-tree you know. Where the little brothers grow. And bring a little brother home for me. At first he was all wrinkled and red. An ever time I tried To make him laugh, he cried. En had the funniest hair-headed head. But now there's fuzz that's just begun to sprout (Like Papa's) on the top. Up where the hairs all stop. En somethin' inside's trying to peck out. His eyes is twins; you can't tell which is whith They're fastened in with thread, En you can see the red Right in the corner where they made stich. Cause if they glued 'em like a dolly's eyes, He'd be just like a doll. En couldn't cry at all. I think the stiches hurts him when he cries; But mama says he cries because he's cranky. Sometimes his nose cries too. En mama says "Oo, Oo." En dries the nose's tears off with her hanky. When 'grotter's hungry he don't have to stir Off Mama's lap, 'cause he Don't go down stairs like we; He don't eat food you know, he just eats her. En papa says when he was little brother, He et his amama too. En Gram, when she was new. She et her ma, an everybody et each other; But when the firstest baby came, why I don't see Who feeded him, ner who It was he et, do you? Ner who it was that picked him off the tree! (Edmund Vance Cooke, in National Magazine)

Edmund Vance Cooke will appear in Broken Bow at the Temple theatre, Saturday evening, July 20, filling an engagement on the Junior Normal course.

Bad Leaders.

Cutting loose from a safe anchorage, with minds distorted by a monstrous ambition, discarding and repudiating the declarations of their party and forgetting its wonderful achievements under this wise national policy, there are today republican leaders who would destroy the great work of McKinley and Dingley, and listening to the clamor of the men who plunged this nation into an era of calamity and depression in 1893, would undo the work of republican statesmen and try again a policy of free-trade, which has at every trial hitherto driven prosperity from the United States.

We care not who these men may be nor what great things they may have done, whenever the republican party follows their advice and elects them to power on such a platform, it writes its own epitaph; repudiates its greatest living principle; destroys the foundation upon which it has built the grandest political organization the world has ever known; undoes the work of half a century of efficient political labor and starts the nation down the declivity of depression, stagnation and disaster, to plunge into the mire of free-trade and democracy, which will speedily obliterate every vestige of the prosperity we now enjoy, bringing the country back again to dark days, similar to those through which it passed at the close of the Buchanan and Cleveland administrations.

More Hail Storms Coming.

Reports are to the effect that the west will be visited by more than the usual number of storms this season. The entire United States had a severe and extended winter and we are promised unusual weather for the remainder of the year. This prophecy has been fulfilled so far, as we have had a tornado and several hail storms right here in Custer county. Tornado insurance is not high and hail insurance is lower than ever before and the only safe plan for the farmer is to insure his growing crop against destruction by the elements.

Whither Are We Drifting?

College graduates, with only an A. B., or B. S., tacked to their names, seem to be about the cheapest things going in New York city. A publisher doing business there is quoted as saying that the easiest kind of help to obtain at $10 a week is the recent college graduate. A leading lawyer of New York goes even further by declaring: "It is appalling to find the number of college graduates of long standing who are today filling clerical positions at $10 or $12 per week. For many years it has been possible in New York city to employ at from $10 to $12 per week large numbers of lawyers of over ten years' standing who were graduates of both college and law school."

The 4th Furnished Employment.

Parents in various parts of the United States were engaged for a couple of days after the 4th collecting the fragments of their children which had been very much scattered by the explosions of giant fire crackers,

RICHMOND PEARSON HOBSON

Was one of the brilliant lights of the American Navy. No future history of naval warfare will be written that does not devote space to Capt. Hobson. When it was known at Santiago that Cervera's fleet was in the harbor, the late Rear-Admiral Sampson conceived the idea of effectually sealing it up and thus prevent any possibility of escape. Volunteers were called for and the first to respond was Hobson. His capture, imprisonment and subsequent liberation are too well known to need recounting. No finer orator is on the platform. His language is beautiful and his effect upon an audience is electrical.
