Travelers over the state this summer are forcibly impressed by the difference in the methods of farming. There has never, perhaps, been a year in which the benefits of good farming stood out so prominently. The late season enabled the weeds to get a good start and they have been unusually in evidence this year. On some farms they seem to be chief product. On others—frequently adjoining the bad fields—the corn is clean and there is scarcely a weed in sight. It's the difference between the pains-taking agriculturalist and the slipshod, careless fellow who is merely after immediate returns with the least possible effort. Even in this he is following a mistaken policy, for the weeds destroy not only the yield, but likewise the quality of grain grown on fields which they infest. The conditions this year present in a striking manner the necessity of a change in agricultural methods. Most land owners have been attempting to do too much and have not succeeded in doing anything too well. Less acreage and more attention to the seed used, the preparation of the ground and other incidentals will get larger returns. The condition of many fields are such that it is up to the owners to take immediate action to clean the land if they expect to even raise profitable crops.

Kansas has long posed as a model prohibition state—with twenty years experience. An investigation, recently conducted, showed that the druggists have a practical monopoly on the sale of liquor and that one was found who admitted that 94 per cent of his business was whisky and 6 per cent drugs and sundries.

No one can discourage Bryan by telling him that if he runs again he will surely be beaten. "Billy," old boy, will take the democratic nomination as often as it is offered him. He knows that without it he cannot become president. The whole country knows that with it—he stands in the same position.

It is being urged in some portions of the state that instructions in swimming should be compulsory in Nebraska schools. That would be a rather difficult law to enforce—during the winter months—and in summer time, some of the school ma'ams—might balk.

Woman's honor is held cheaply in New York. A man who pleaded guilty to criminal assault was given a three months' sentence in jail. And still some people wonder why there are lynchings.

The west, and especially Nebraska, is extremely fortunate in the class of immigrants that have come and settled on its fertile lands during the past score of years. They have come, largely from the land of the midnight sun—from Germany, Denmark and other northern countries—the kind of men who help to build up instead of tear down—who obey and observe the laws instead of violating them. Contrasted with the immigrants that reach some sections of the United States, Nebraska is to be congratulated. The people of this section have escaped the contamination of the scum of Europe. There are no black hand societies, no hot-beds of anarchy, no discontented, murderous foreigners ready to kill and burn. Instead, the non-American element is peace-loving and industrious—ambitions for education, zealous in religious work and quick to assimilate the best of the things they find in their new home.

There is a war of extermination being waged in some sections of the country against house cats. The felines are in great disfavor because of the fact that they are contaminated with germs of so many diseases. Scientists have conclusively shown that cats carry and spread tuberculosis—one of the most dreaded of all diseases. There is little use of waging war on the white plague, some claim, without first getting rid of house cats. The cats are all right in barns, corn cribs, warehouses and places infested by rats, but their presence in the house is not a necessity and are to be discouraged since it is found to be a fact that they are purveyors of sure death diseases. This view will no doubt be bitterly opposed by many—especially old maids—who are fond of their Toms and tabbies, but there is no doubt but that there is a great deal that is objectionable about the felines as "house tenants."

With one or two established facts—such as that Bryan wants the nomination for president so badly he can taste it and that William H. Taft is the favorite for the nomination with many republicans—the correspondents at Washington are able to write interesting, though somewhat visionary, reports about national politics. The wise reader discounts dog day politics for the reason that state legislative bodies are not in session, the national congress is down and but during the headed period and the nation's executive and members of his cabinet are spending the sweltering days far from their desks. It is of the nature of things that the fountains of political information have been dried up by the mid-summer torridity.

The Jamestown exposition officials now announce that the buildings are about completed. It has been running some months in a half-baked stage. The attendance has been small, but it is likely to increase as the weather gets cooler. September and October are delightful months in that climate.

Why didn't Judge Landis make a provision in his sentence that the Standard Oil fellows should be imprisoned till they paid the 29,240,000 fine? Some of them would be digging down in their socks for small change by this time.

This is the time of year to be merciful to live stock. This should apply to all animals, but more especially to horses. A little attention—with frequent opportunities to secure fresh water—will mean much to beasts of burden.

Up to the present writing Uncle Sam has not spent that $29,000,000 fine imposed upon the Standard Oil company.

South Omaha Market.
Under date of yesterday Clay, Robinson & Co., South Omaha, report as follows:

We have had liberal receipts of cattle here this week. Prices last week wound up considerably lower, and figuring in this week's decline on steers values now are 15 @ 25c lower on the general supply of killing steers. Feeders were in bad shape at the close last week. The yards were full at the close and a good many cattle were carried over from last week. Prices on the good heavy cattle are not over a quarter lower, while all other classes are 25 @ 35c off from the middle of last week. Cows and heifers have been in the heaviest proportion and prices now are 50c below the middle of last week.

So make up your mind this very minute that if your hair ever comes out you will use Ayer's Hair Vigor. It makes the scalp healthy. The hair stays in. It cannot do anything else. It's nature's way.

Only When They Forget.

People who ought to have known better, actually fancied that because the Government pursued the policy of an ordinarily prudent individual and had money ahead, they were grievously wronged. So they "wanted a change," and they got it with a vengeance. The democratic party did not keep its tariff pledges to the people to the letter. But the bugaboo of a surplus disappeared, and was succeeded by the "endless chain" of issuing bonds to replenish the gold in the treasury, greatly to the profit of the Wall street captains of finance. And as to the period of financial and industrial depression that lasted during Cleveland's second term, there is no occasion to speak. People who have not forgotten the political history of that time, know all about the suffering and misery of those four terrible years.

For a decade the country has enjoyed a prosperity that is as unparalleled as were the hard times that preceded it. When the republican party took charge in the spring of 1897, the first thought was to restore the prosperity that democratic bungling had driven away. The protective tariff was re-enacted, and provision made for ample revenue for current expenses—and something over. People know the result.

And now after all these years and their lessons, the old attempt to create a scare about the surplus is renewed. It will succeed only when the American people forget.

Opening of Government Lands.

The Wyoming land board has just announced the opening, under the Carey act, of 150,000 acres of the Eden valley lands in Sweetwater and Fremont counties, north of Rock Springs on the Union Pacific railroad. Thirty thousand acres are now available for public entry. It is one of the finest bodies of irrigable land in the state. The land is irrigated from the public domain under the Carey act. Any person 21 years old or over is entitled to a claim of 160 acres or any legal sub-division thereof, provided such person has never previously made use of the Carey act. The land is a rich sandy loam, free from Alkali and stones and will produce abundant crops of grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables.

Water for irrigating is obtained from the Big and Little Sandy rivers and their tributaries, which head in the great watershed of the Wind river range of mountains and drain an area of thousands of square miles. The water is distributed by an extensive system of canals and ditches. Elasticity to the supply is obtained by two immense reservoirs which impound billions of cubic feet of water. The fee to the state which accompanies application for each claim is 25 cents per acre and an additional 25 cents per acre is paid upon making final proof within three years. The cost of the irrigating system is charged against the land at the rate of $30 per acre, payable in ten annual installments. All of the irrigation works become the property of the people who own the land, each acre representing one share.

Bumyodies.
"I never saw such a rubber-neck," sneered Mrs. Gable. "Just because the doctor stopped at our house yesterday she immediately wanted to know what was the matter." "Yes," replied Mrs. Naylor; "I wonder how she'd like the rest of us to be that curious about her. You know the doctor stopped at her house to-day, too." "You don't say? I wonder what's the matter there?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Hopeful Future.
"Our boy Josh don't seem to be satisfied with anything around the place," said Mrs. Cornstossel regretfully. "Let him alone," answered her husband. "Mebbe it's a good sign. You can't tell but what he'll grow up to be one of these reformers that cause a sensation in politics."
