from Washington Interesting to the Republican Readers.

Secretary Cortelyou professes to be thoroughly satisfied with the manner in which the financial situation is shaping itself.

In New York, the clearing house of the nation, financial affairs are much easier and much money has been sent by the banks of the metropolis to the middle west, particularly to St.
Louis, where heavy demands have been made by the smaller banks of the southwest for currency with which to move the crops. Despite all this and notwithstanding that Mr. Cortelyou said this week that the crisis had passed to such an extent that the matter was not even discussed at the cabinet meeting, there is an air of decided nervousness in the business world that probably will force Congress to take up early in the coming session the matter of currency reform. The fact is pointed to that panics come in seven year cycles and that the country has been notably free from any financial disturbance since 1893. Having skipped 1900, the seventh year after the disastrous days of 1893, the superstitious are wondering whether this year of 1907 will witness a panic having the force of two. So far as the real business of the nation is concerned, there never was, according to government reports, a healthier condition. But there is no telling where the nervous apprehension of a prosperity-seated people will lead them.

Big sticks are plentiful enough everywhere, perhaps, in this administration, save only that telephone and telegraph companies throughout the country are finding them scarcer every year.
Either artificial cultivation of the timber suitable for poles will have to become general or a substitute for wood must be found.
One of Uncle Sam's consular agents stationed at a German city reports that a factory has been started there for the manufacture of glass telephone poles of the standard size. These are reinforced by a meshwork of wire threads. If at all practicable, they will almost certainly be useful in tropical countries where telephone companies complain that swarms of ants fasten upon the wooden poles and devour them so completely that nothing is left except the glass insulators hanging over the space where the insulator pit used to be.
Whether glass poles are adaptable for use in this country remains to be seen. It is understood that the experts of the Bell telephone system investigated their merits some time ago just as the engineering department of the same organization has looked into the subject of concrete poles.
The present opinion, however, appears to be that so long as wooden poles can be secured they are, all this being equal, the best for use in American conditions.
That is why the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, in co-operation with the United States Forestry Bureau, has for several years been carrying on elaborate experiments for determining the best means of prolonging the life of wooden poles.
The two organizations maintain, in co-operation, experiment stations at Dover, N. J., Thorndale, Pa., Pisgah, N. H., and Wilmington, N. C. The American Telephone & Telegraph Company supplies a fixed number of poles each month upon which the experts base their experiments and observations. It has already been shown that seasoned timber in contact with the ground will outlast unseasoned, and dry wood is more receptive of preservative fluid than is green wood. If scientific skill succeeds in greatly lengthening the existence of the average wooden pole, and if the methods of scientific forestry which the forestry bureau is trying to inculcate become generally adopted, it is likely that glass sticks will not be needed in this country to carry the vast network of telephone wires by which practically every American is able to converse with every other.

Mrs. M. D. Callen, who, for the past four weeks has been confined to her room, was operated on last Saturday morning. Dr. Stokes, of Omaha, performed the surgical work assisted by Dr. Barthol-mew and wife and Dr. Talbot, of Broken Bow. It is hoped that she will improve rapidly. At the present writing she is getting along nicely.

One afternoon recently a quartette of young people were having a skate on a lagoon in a near and Madge Bishop was precipitated into the cold water. Walt Cole hurried to her rescue and soon had her safely on shore, although she received a ducking.

does not always mean "all coal," even if it is full weight. This is a joke in the trade, but it's no joke to the consumer who pays for it "all coal" and gets ten to in. If you buy your coal from us you get all coal, full weight and the best, well-screened coal obtainable without
