Continuation of The Sunny South

It has been said the charred remains of the gallant defenders of the Alamo were collected by Juan N. Seguin, a faithful Mexican friend of the Texans and placed in some vessel and secretly buried in the graveyard, then beside the old parish church, some say in front of the altar of the church, but if so all trace of the vessel has been lost. The cemetery has been twice removed, once to a site near the present Market House and Auditorium and later to its present site on the Alazan creek.

It is said that Thermopolae had its messenger of defeat but Alamo had none. Santa Anna flushed with his victory at the Alamo, went in search of Sam Houston, the honored patriot who was supreme command of the Texan forces and expected to meet him with a far superior force and one better equipped and his defeat to crush the Texan rebellion, which he would certainly have done had victory perched on his banner.

The story of the Alamo and later still the dastardly massacre of prisoners at Goliad were the incitements needful for Texans. There were only two views—Victory or Death, or worse still, Slavery and greater tyranny. Then came a better spirit of union and a strengthening of forces. The army was a small one but it consisted of men who were noble, brave and desperate and who fought for liberty, country and home, the most noble of all aspirations for heroes.

Houston and his forces retreated and increased strength, and Santa Anna followed, despising the apparently puny Texan army and sanguine of success. The crisis came at San Jacinto on April 21, 1836, when the two armies were arrayed before each other. The Texans abated their time, made a most desolate attack and came on the Mexicans like a tornado. The Mexicans fought well but could not resist the desperate onslaught of the Texans. They fell back, were routed and defeated. The field was strewn with the wounded and the slain and the waters engulfed many who tried to escape. Thus was Santa Anna's proud army practically annihilated and in twenty-four hours Santa Anna, who managed to escape from the field, was captured in disguise and stood a prisoner and suppliant for mercy before the wounded Texan hero, Sam Houston.

The rest of the story is a natural sequence. Santa Anna concurred in the Texan aspiration for liberty and signed a treaty to that effect and Houston in humane spirit saved his life, though many clamoured for the blood of the murderer of the brave men of the Alamo and Goliad and he who had so tyrannically oppressed them. Thus Texas became a free and independent republic, and is now an honored state in our glorious Union.

CHARLES H. STANFORD.
The story of the Alamo is told as briefly as could be and give anything like the conditions and facts of these noble heroes who gave their lives to liberate Texas from Mexican oppression.

And now we close our second and last day at this old historical city, leaving out much of interest and much that I have seen, but for time and space I must now say farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Morrow, who have so grandly entertained me on this, my second and last day in San Antonio. And as I now clasp the hand of these good people in a parting farewell, feeling in my soul a deep sense of gratitude to these dear friends and others who I have met in the beautiful city of San Antonio, for, the sweet pleasure afforded me by giving to me their time, helpful suggestions and much needed information, and for the courtesy and splendid hospitality shown me as a stranger and an unexpected guest among them. And to these friends and to this city I now give a parting farewell and now board the Katy Flyer at 9:30 p. m. for Austin, Texas, where I will stop for a few hours. Austin, Texas. Midnight and here I am at the great capitol of Texas. After three efforts I find a stopping place for the balance of the night as it is now after 1 o'clock a. m.

March 28: With a tired body, but wakeful mind, I now lie down and close my eyes to the scenes of the past, expecting the mystic power of sweet restful sleep to kiss our eyelids still and the happy dreams of home, sweet home to allow no disturbing factor to molest or make us afraid. Good night!

7 o'clock a. m. A delightful morning, though a trifle warm for winter apparel, but as our destination is northward we will not make the exchange for summer apparel just now, but will abide the sweating process for a little while longer, expecting at any moment a cooling message on the south end of a northern breeze, as a reminder that good old Nebraska has not yet placed an order for the warm days of the good summer time.

We now take a stroll looking for some place to get breakfast, for we must utilize the little time we have here in the best possible manner as we must leave for Kansas City this forenoon at 11:35.

Got breakfast at a lunch counter, nothing extra, not worth the price but we pay our bill and move on. Now on a street car viewing the city. We pass by a number of fine large buildings, state institutions in the vicinity of Krug Park, a beautiful part of the city, covered with fine shade trees and the lovely roses are in profusion everywhere, waiting on the morning breeze the sweet perfume making the atmosphere fragrant with the odor from the myriads of beautiful flowers.

The state university is a magnificent place with many large buildings so nicely located and with such elegant surroundings. Austin is a beautiful city with delightful and lovely surroundings. With its wide, clean, well kept streets. The beauty and elegance of its fine residences and lovely homes so picturesquely surrounded with shade trees of various kinds and grotesquely ornamented with flowers of many colors, giving a neatness and homelike appearance to the premises so appreciative to the inmates of well kept home.

We now leave the street car to visit for a little while the capitol building, one of the most substantial as well as one of the best buildings in the world. It was commenced in 1882 and dedicated to the state on the 16th of May, 1888, six years in building. It is the seventh largest building in the world, and the only public building that was ever built and paid for in real estate costing the state of Texas 3,000,000 acres of western land, valued at one dollar per acre at the time the deal was consummated between the state and a Chicago Syndicate. This building covers at its foundation three and three quarters acres of ground. It is built in the form of a Greek cross. It has four entrances on the first or entrance floor. It is 600 feet through the building from east to west, including galleries and 566 feet, 6 inches inside of doors east and west. It is 300 feet through the building North and South, including galleries, 288 and 10 inches inside of doors from North to South from grade level to top of dome it is 313 feet. The Goddess of Justice is five and one-half feet from point to point and is sixteen and one-half feet in circumference. The building has 900 windows, 258 rooms, 560 openings, seven and one-half miles of wainscoting, 27 acres of floor space and has 1,200,000 tons of Texas granite taken from granite mountain 400 feet high at its summit and covering 600 acres at its base. Every particle of the material in this building is a product of Texas. I am told the granite in this building was donated by three individuals.

On account of space this story will not be continued in this paper but is complete in book form, and those wishing to secure a copy can do so by addressing G. K. Russom, Broken Bow. Price 50 cents a copy.

H. M. Sullivan appeared before the Board to show cause why certain fat cattle should not be assessed to him, and filed the following explanation why said cattle should not be assessed:

Upon request of the County Assessor and Board of Equalization to show cause why 85 head of feeding cattle, delivered May 10th 1908, to Geo. Mulvaney, and in my possession April 1st 1908, should not be listed to me, I for cause show to said Honorable Board, that on said date I was not the owner of said cattle, but that on March 23rd 1908 I sold the same to the said Mulvaney, and give him a bill of sale therefore, and secured from him the sum of $500.00 as a part of the purchase price, and said cattle on the first day of April 1908 was the property of said Mulvaney.
