Junior Normal Was a Success.

In addition to all these, the admirable instruction in all the common school studies should, and doubtless will, add greatly to the efficiency of the teachers, who received the benefit of such instruction in the various classes. Altogether, the term was all that the most enthusiastic friends of the school could have hoped. From the first day to the last there was a noteworthy absence of friction either from the students or the faculty.

The few regrettable things in connection with the school were such as no one here could avoid. The principal difficulty was the lack of funds, which were necessary for the members of the faculty to assume double burdens in the closing days of the school, cut down the length of term to six weeks, and made a demand upon the public-spirited citizens of Broken Bow for a generous subscription to help out with the finances. But in both these unfortunate circumstances, those upon whom the burden fell rose to the occasion with cheerful heroism, recognizing that the attempt at carrying on eight Junior Normals with the same appropriation which was originally granted for five must necessarily result in a strain at some points. The faculty cheerfully carried the extra work, the citizens of Broken Bow subscribed so liberally as to meet in full all deficiencies, and the students at the Junior Normal came as near doing eight weeks work in six weeks as it is possible for any body of students to do.

Prof. J. G. W. Lewis in his instruction in History and Civics made those sometimes dry and tedious subjects to live and throb with vital interest. Prof. Lewis has a host of friends at this place, who know that whatever he undertakes will be well done; his work in the Junior Normal was no exception in this respect. The entertainments provided in connection with the Junior Normal were worthy of the place they occupied. Our own "Bix," otherwise Dr. Bixby, of Lincoln, interested and delighted a large audience with his lecture on "London," given in his own characteristic and inimitable style. Prof. Adrian M. Newens held the breathless attention of all hearers for nearly two hours, with his matchless rendition of "A Message from Mars." Perhaps one of the most serious errors in the entertainment course was in not providing a larger audience-room for this number.

The evening of music, by Taylor's Orchestra, was one of the most thoroughly enjoyable that has ever occurred in Broken Bow. Aside from the full orchestra, which was admirable in the superlative degree, the vocal solos by Miss Bowen and Mrs. Taylor, the cornet solo by Prof. Taylor, and the violin solos by Miss L'Amoureux, would have won applause in any company of musical artists anywhere. The people of Broken Bow should appreciate—as many of them do—the fact that we have in our little town a body of musical talent rarely to be equalled even in cities of much greater size.

In addition to the above named popular entertainments, our people have been favored by lectures from two notable men in public life—Senator Burkett, and Hon. G. W. Norris, both of whom delivered magnificent addresses upon questions of living interest. Senator Burkett spoke on "The Protest of Americanism Against Government Ownership of Railroads." Something of surprise was expressed that the Senator chose a theme savoring so strongly of Politics; but every hearer was intensely interested, and many whose previous ideas had been strongly in favor of "Government Ownership" went away with more than a suspicion that it would be well to review the foundation of their beliefs. The Senator is a clear and forceful reasoner, a deep thinker, and a most entertaining and convincing speaker. It is greatly regretted that his coming had not been more thoroughly advertised, as many who would have been glad to hear him were unaware of the date.

Mr. Norris spoke of "A Practical Plan for International Peace," in which he made it clear that the United States, by the logic of its position of history, has by far a better opportunity in leading the world in this direction, and that our Nation will be remiss in its duty to humanity if it fails to do this. His address was a master-piece of logic and of the best style of modern eloquence.

Altogether the session of the Junior Normal has been satisfactory in an eminent degree. By all who have been in a position to know, it is conceded that not only in numbers, but in interest, genuine effort and enthusiasm, the Junior Normal at Broken Bow has been second to none, if not absolutely the best in the state. CONTRIBUTED.
