OYSTERS

That is why the wise housekeeper insists on having "SEALSHIP" Oysters. The price sounds higher, but the cost is actually lower; because you get solid meats—no water. "SEALSHIP" Oysters are carefully packed in steel containers with ice around the containers, but not in contact with the Oysters. This method makes a truly astonishing difference in the flavor of and appearance. "SEALSHIP" Oysters are as firm as when they came out of the sea, taste like half-shell oysters just opened.

You eat "SEALSHIP" with indescribable relish because you know they are wholesome, fresh and healthful.

You will find them at our store. We always have "SEALSHIP"—would not have any other kind

AT THE CORCORAN MINE.

By Harry B. Izard.

boys were putting in timbers down below and the last load had just been sent to them. I was about to fill my pipe, when I noticed the bucket-dumper, on top, straighten up and speak to some one; at the same time Tumley jumped to his feet and yelled:

"Hello! Jack! You got back just in the nick of time."

"Sure enough! There was Trellis, standing by the door of his little office, looking at us with his familiar smile.

"You must have left before those telegrams reached you," I said.

He nodded! Then looking serious, suddenly jerked his head in the direction of the boarding house, entered the office and closed the door. I knew that jerk of the head meant only one thing and that was to bring Bess in double-quick order; so telling Tumley to keep his eye peeled, I commenced hiking it for the house. I arrived just as Klipton was getting off his horse. I beat him to the door and bawled out for Bess to sprint towards the shaft-house, as Jack was there in the office and wanted to see her. She gave a joyful little squeal and immediately struck out, followed by Klipton, who was cussin' to beat the band. You bet, I kept between him and the girl, and as a consequence, we both entered the shaft-house together.

"Don't you dare go into that cursed hound alone," yelled Klipton, after Bess.

"Excuse me, Klippie," drawled Tumley, getting in his way, "but you haven't got the girl yet, and, from what I can see, you stand a poorer show than ever. Billy, open the door for the lady!" Before I could move a muscle, Jack suddenly made his appearance, took Bess in his arms and carried her inside; the door closing upon them.

Then Klipton let himself out and did some of the fanciest cussin' I ever had the pleasure of listening to: he simply soared in the realms of cussedness. Finally, Tumley became weary of so much eloquence and grabbing him by the arms, sung out for me to take the "shooting irons" from his pockets. After this had been done, Long Jake sat him down real hard, on a pile of timbers.

"Sit there, you toad," he said, "just let us hear one more cackle and d—u me if I don't drop you down the shaft." Klipton all at once grew wise, and expressed himself as being perfectly satisfied. There wasn't a sound from the other side of the partition, and for half an hour we stood around, waiting for something to happen.

All of a sudden, we heard a galloping horse go past the dump pile. The next minute, Steele rushed in, his face white as talc. He stopped and caught hold of the shaft-pole for support. "Have you boys heard?" he gasped. "POOR JACK TRELLIS WAS KILLED IN THE AUBREY DRIFT THIS AFTERNOON, NEAR ASPEN! About twenty tons of rock dropped on him as he was making the examination. They haven't recovered the body yet." I felt my shivering cold all over! Tumley and the bucket-dumper sat down where they stood! Klipton turned white and began swearing softly, under his breath. For a minute I couldn't move! Then I raised my arm with an effort, and pointed to the office. Steele gave one look at me, rushed forward and threw open the door. "Oh! My God!" I heard him say. "Then we all crowded to the threshold. THE ONLY OCCUPANT OF THE ROOM WAS BESS! She was seated in an easy chair, her eyes wide open, with a smile on her face. She was quite dead, of course. Trellis had kept his word and taken her with him over the Great Divide. The doctor called it "heart failure," and every man-jack of us, including Klipton, swore he was right.

Nebraska During 1909.

During the week of December 21 to 28 inclusive, The Lincoln State Journal will accept $3 from mail subscribers for the whole year of 1909, without Sunday, or $4 with Sunday. The regular price is $4 and $5. This cut-price is good only during the Bargain Week, and all you have to do is to mail your remittance to the State Journal, Lincoln, Neb., and the paper will be mailed to your address commencing January 1, 1910, when it will be stopped unless you pay for it another year. All subscriptions are payable in advance, consequently no unpaid bills, and this saving together with cutting out solicitors' salaries, hotel bills and railroad expenses make it possible to give you this cut-price. The Journal is the paper you want to read during the legislature because it is right here in Lincoln and with its great corps of trained newspaper men will be able to give you the most thorough and reliable legislative news. Its uncontrolled by party bosses or selfish ambition to hold or get a job for its proprietor. Its not afraid to print all the news all the time about all things. Its a clean home paper, no liquor or unclean medical ads appear in its columns. Its business is profitable enough to give its owners legitimate returns without making alliances with any interests opposed to the public welfare. Every public matter is treated impartially, unselfishly and entirely from the standpoint of the people's interest. One year's reading will convince you that the State Journal is truly Nebraska's greatest newspaper. Remember, this special rate is made only during this one week of December 21 to 28 to get new subscribers and the regular price of $4 and $5 will be charged thereafter. Why not test the State Journal this one year and see if its publishers are really conducting their newspaper upon such high standards?
