INFIDEL BROWN VS. EVANGELIST BROWN
From a Run-Away Boy to Millionaire Publisher.

Everybody knows about "The Ram's Horn" that free house paper that has been such a force in the religious world. It has been "independent" in every sense and has eschewed any disclaimers or reference to those doctrinal questions that have not one-half of the combinations of the land at sword's point against the other half.

But maybe those who know about the paper do not know so much about the founder and for many years the editor, of Ram's Horn. A word about "Ram's Horn" Brown will be of particular interest at this time because he has been engaged by the Western Redpath Chautauqua System to devote his whole time the coming season to lecturing at their summer assemblies. Like so many of the great men of the nation, Elijah P. Brown was born of a poor family, in a poor town in a poor industrial district of Ohio. He says that he can not remember that his father ever held him on his lap or that his mother ever kissed him. Yet they were honest folks, ever churchgoing Christians. They never seemed to have time to get acquainted with their children and to realize that their little hearts were bleeding for love.

The little Elijah ran away from home while yet a very little boy and became apprenticed to a printer. He became a good workman and developed a business judgment that soon made him master of his own profit.

paying shop in a small city. He was not in sympathy with the church or anything that stood for morality; in fact he was a "tough nut."

He became a devout believer in Ingalls and was proud of the intimate friendship that developed between the eminent model and himself.

It was after he had become a millionaire publisher, a writer of great reputation and a lecturer of recognized ability along the lines of his agnostic theories that by the merest chance Mr. Brown heard the great Moody preach a sermon before twenty thousand people in Chicago. Brown went to see; he stayed to consider and he went away to pray. He returned to his home in another state and struggled manfully with his doubts, but not being satisfied, he returned to Chicago and sought out Mr. Moody. That talk settled matters and the Infidel Brown became the Evangelist Brown.

It is a tale by itself how he was a country preacher; founded the "Ram's Horn" and lost his fortune; how he continued the fight, with the aid of friends, until he finally put the paper on a paying basis and gave the world a new literature.

It is only of late that the "Ram's Horn" has been giving Chautauqua dates, but he is proving to be a great success. Contrary to expectation Mr. Brown is not soured by his early, painful experience, but is one of the most humorous speakers on the American platform. He believes that fun and gospel are the twin handmaidens of human usefulness.

Market Report.

South Omaha, June 29th, 1910.

There is quite moderate supplies of cattle both here and Chicago today, and the trade is generally strong and active, prices about a dime better than yesterday. This is the first real reaction we have had in several days. Top cattle cattle here today brought $8.00, which is also the highest price paid in ten days. Cows and heifers are also a little better today, about a dime, but still prices are materially lower than a week or ten days. Good to choice killing steers are quotable at $7.50 @ $8.00; fair to good $6.90 @ $7.40; common to fair $6.40 @ $6.90; good to choice sows and heifers $6.00 @ $6.75; fair to good $5.25 @ $5.75; veal calves $5.00 @ $7.00 fat bulls $4.50; @ $5.50. The stocker and feeders trade has also experienced a severe break, prices being the lowest in several months.

The hog market today was about steady with yesterday's
