Cedar Rapids Era: A very serious accident happened to Mr. W. West, postmaster at Dublin, last Saturday afternoon. It appears that Mr. West, about three miles north of Dublin, was digging a well, and Mr. West was assisting him, at the bottom, the well was 108 feet deep. Mr. West was cautioned about the danger of the buckets falling, because of the curbing bulging into the well several inches; but he said let it come. When the bucket was about 40 feet down, it struck the curbing, the hook dropped into the bucket, and it getting loose, went down nearly 70 feet, some way striking Mr. West on the head. He soon gained consciousness and called for the rope; it was let down; he took hold of it and brought up his tools, fainting away as soon as they got hold of him at the top. A horse was run down after Dr. Hazle, who immediately went and dressed the scalp wound, pronouncing it serious, but has hopes of his recovery. A bad gash is cut about three inches long over the top and left side of his head.

The blow was received on the temple, crushing in the skull in a terrible manner. The parents were absent, but Mr. Fowler was passing, saw the accident and picked the child up, as he supposed, in a dying condition. Drs. Palmer & Ryan raised the fractured parts of the skull and dressed the wound, and their little patient appears to be in a fair way to recover from her fearful wounds.

A special from Tombstone, Arizona, the 10th, says: Eight hostile Apaches attacked a hog ranche at Antelope Springs, sixteen miles from this city, this morning. There were only two men there at the time—George Ward and Amos Williams. The former was killed. The latter escaped and brought the news here. Citizens armed themselves and went in pursuit, with little chance of overtaking the hostiles. The Indians came from the direction of Sonora, and were probably a part of those left in the mountains by Gen. Crook. They were on horseback. The horses are believed to have been stolen from ranches below here. Several parties left here for Sonora the past few days, and grave fears are entertained for their fate. The main body of the hostiles is near Casas

Grande. Their overtures for peace were rejected by the Mexican authorities, and Colonel Joaquin Terrezos was, at last accounts, organizing a force to attack them in the mountains. News has been received via Sonora that Terrezos, while reconnoitering, was captured. The report lacks confirmation.

By order of the second assistant postmaster-general, to take effect September 30, the star route from Niobrara to Fort Randall, Dakota, has been discontinued. J. R. Miner was the lower bidder for supplying service on this route, and was awarded the contract, which was afterward annulled because of technical imperfections. The reason given at the postoffice department for abolition of the route is that since the date of the advertisement for proposals the railroad system in that section has been extended so that no necessity for star route service exists.

Secretary Folger has accepted the resignation of Supervising Architect Hill, which the latter tendered on Wednesday.

Secretary Folger has raised an important question in regard to the operation of the new civil service law, which he states in a letter addressed by him to the commissioners to-day. A few days ago he made a requisition on the commission for a person to fill a $900 clerkship. The commission certified to him the names of the four persons from whom to make his selection. The secretary finds himself in doubt as to whether section 154 of the revised statutes does not limit him in making his selection from four names. He says in his letter to the commissioners that this section gives preference, other things being equal, to honorably discharged soldiers and sailors of the late war, and that section 7 of the civil service act provides that nothing contained in that act shall be construed to take away the preference given in section 154 to that class of persons. The secretary asks for further information on the subject. His opinion is if one of the persons sent to him is an honorably discharged soldier or sailor he must select that one.

Cardinal McCabe will be invited to attend some of the meetings, at which the Irish agitation will be discussed.

ENGLAND.

The London Times in tracing the antecedents of O'Donnell, slayer of Carey, finds he is 45 years of age, and a native of County Donegal, Ireland. He has been to America several times. He served in the American war; lived for some time at Philadelphia, and kept a public house on the Canadian border. He invested his funds in silver mines and in Fenian bonds and lost money. He returned to Ireland last May and frequented the company of Irish-Americans in Londonderry. He carried a revolver and was considered a strong nationalist, but opposed the invincibles. He denounced Carey when the latter turned informer, and declared he would not shoot, but would burn him by inches. He went to the Cape to seek his fortune, because he considered America played out. He had never seen Carey before taking passage, and had no idea the informer was on board the steamer Kinfaun's Castle when he embarked. The defense will probably be that Carey tried to shoot the prisoner, who wrenched the revolver away and used it to protect his own life. It is stated O'Donnell's brother, who is living in Ireland, will endeavor to obtain the services of Sullivan, M. P., to conduct the defense. Friends of O'Donnell ridicule the idea that he went to the Cape for the special purpose of killing Carey.

Fleeing From Certain Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—A party of twelve Americans who fled from Guaymas arrived last night. They said the people were leaving the city by hundreds. There was hardly a house but contained some victim of fever. The authorities had given over the work of burying the dead to a pack of Indians, who went from house to house, carrying the bodies of those they supposed to be dead or dying. The bodies were buried so rapidly that mistakes occurred, and many are supposed to have been put under the ground while still alive. This was mainly due to the disease, which at the favorable turning point leaves the patient in a comatose state, mistaken by the Indians as death. The whole city is panic-stricken. Merchants have closed their stores, and nailed their doors. Restaurants are all closed. There is no assistance obtainable. Reports from Hermasillo state the fever is raging there. At Mazatlan its ravages are even more frightful than at Guaymas. All who could were leaving for the mountains, carrying off what bedding they could pack and a little food.

GUAYMAS, Mexico, September 17.—It is now clearly established that the disease raging here is yellow fever. All who can are fleeing from the city. The medical corps is being reinforced as rapidly as possible. Twelve of the lately arrived opera troupe have died. Eighteen deaths were reported yesterday. Many others were not reported. The streets are almost deserted, the only sounds heard being the rumbling dead carts. The board of health have issued orders that dead bodies be immediately removed and buried.

A Terrible Boiler Explosion.

PITTSBURG, PA., Sept. 20.—Between 1 and 2 o'clock this afternoon a shock was felt throughout the city, which shook the buildings to their foundations, smashed windows and terribly frightened the residents of the south side, who rushed from their houses into the street in terror. Immediately after the shock an alarm of fire was sounded. Upon investigation it was found that the large boilers in the flagging department of the Sligo iron works had exploded with fearful violence, scattering flying fragments in every direction, setting fire to the Lake Erie railroad shops and a number of dwelling houses in the vicinity. News of the disaster spread like wildfire, and soon thousands of people were on their way to the scene of destruction. A fearful sight met their gaze. The boiler, a brick structure, was a complete wreck, as were also a number of passenger and freight cars, and the master mechanic's shops of the Lake Erie railroad, while a row of dwellings on the opposite side of the street were in flames. Men, women and children were running about wringing their hands and calling for friends whom they supposed were either killed or wounded in the ruins of the flagging department. Scattered around were the dead and dying, some with arms and legs off, some disfigured almost beyond recognition and others suffering from painful burns and scalds. By this time the police had arrived in force and the work of removing the killed and injured from the ruins was begun. It was found that at the time of the explosion twenty men were at work. Of these nine are reported all right. Three were killed and eight badly injured, four fatally, while four children of Charles Douglass, who lived across the way, were also badly hurt. Following is a list of the killed: John W. Allen, top of his head blown off.

Charles Douglass, side of his head blown off.

John McGavigan, scalded and sides crushed in.

Neighbors did all they could to relieve the sufferers. The boiler was an upright, six feet in diameter, and was split in four fragments, the largest being blown 200 feet, landing in the middle of the Monongahela river. It is not known what caused the explosion. It was just after the dinner hour, and the steam had been turned off only a few minutes when it exploded. The coroner has empaneled a jury and a thorough investigation will be made. The Sligo iron works are owned by Phillips, Merick & Co. Their loss is estimated at $10,000. Loss to the Erie railroad and dwellings, about $3,000.

Louis House, one of the victims, has since died, and W. M. Stewart and Christ Miller are not expected to live through the night.

Lieutenant Greeley Reported Dead by an Esquimaux.

LONDON, September 23.—Prof. Nordenskjöld telegraphs the following from Serabster to the Associated Press agent at London:

"During my excursion on the land of Ice, Dr. Nathorst, with the steamer Sofia, in charge of Captain Nilsson, anchored on the 27th of July in a bay near Cape York, 72 degrees 5 minutes north. The doctor was accompanied from God Haven by an Esquimaux interpreter named Hans Christian, who had met at God Haven a party of 15 Esquimaux from Walstenholm. They stated that they had been informed by other natives that the commander of an American expedition, whose name they pronounced 'Kasleigh,' and another member of a party which had arrived at a point north of Smith Sound, were dead, and that the rest of the expedition had returned on sledges to Littleton Island. Unfortunately, this information was not given to Dr. Nathorst until he returned to God Haven. I myself examined Christian, and his account seems to be reliable. Before starting northward the Sofia met, July 16th, at God Haven, the whaler Proteos, which intended to proceed to Littleton Island, and, if necessary and unimpeded by ice, to Lady Franklin Bay. When the Sofia visited Smith Sound, that body was incumbered by ice."

Fatal Fire-Works.

PITTSBURG, September 23.—An explosion of fire-works in an outbuilding of the exposition to-night resulted in the death of one boy and the cremation of three valuable horses, and the destruction of 300 feet of stabling. The fire-works were intended for a display to-morrow night, and were stored in a large frame building adjoining the stables. At 9 o'clock an explosion was heard, and the flames shot up and consumed the buildings and stables in a short time. In the stables were many valuable horses entered for the races which begin Tuesday. Three of these—Polkadot, Maud R. and Green Horse—were burned, and the others rescued. In the stables occupied by Polkadot was a jockey named Thomas Rogers, of Kalamazoo. The flames spread so rapidly that he was burned to death before he could escape. Polkadot was owned by W. J. Small, of Kalamazoo, and valued at $2,500. Maud R. and Green Horse were owned by J. S. Duster, of Boston. Maud R. was valued at $3,000, and Green Horse was purchased last week for $2,000. The exposition is $5,000; partially insured.
