An Army of Mad Men Make an Attack Upon the Jail.

A riot of great magnitude, resulting in loss of life and destruction of property, began in Cincinnation the evening of the 28th of March and was renewed on that of the 28th. Its origin was a verdict of manslaughter in the case of the state slaughter in the case of one Berner, who brutally murdered W. H. Kirk in the latter's stable on the night of December 24th last. Berner was brought before Judge Matthews and sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty years, being the full limit of the law. Ten thousand angry people thereupon gathered at Music Hall on the night of the 27th to take action on the verdict. upon gathered at Music Hall on the night of the 27th to take action on the verdict. Strong resolutions were adopted, and upon adjournment of the meeting the vast crowd moved directly to the jail, where they be-gan an attack. Berner, in the afternoon, was started for the penitentiary at Colum-bus, but the mob were determined, if they effected an entrance to the jail, to lynch other murderers confined there. The pris-oner, en route to the penitentiary, escaped oner, en route to the penitentiary, escaped from the cars, but was recaptured next day and gladly took refuge in the state prison to escape the vengeance of the mob who were looking for him all along the route. In the meantime the attack on the jail at Cincinnati continued and desperate resistance was made by those inside to protect the result of the res the prison. The riot act was read and the militia called upon to disperse the crowd. Firing took place and several were killed and wounded.

The following is a list of killed and wounded; Private Edward Muthert, slight; Private Herman Rose, slight; Private Harry Rolling, serious; Private Charles Gibbons, Rolling, serious; Private Charles Gibbons, slight; Policeman Phil. Nunn, dead; Dr. Arthur Bantillier, arm shattered; Henry Yaeger, slight; John Griffith, fatal; Martin Rafferty, fatal; C. L. Bartling, serious; Lawton, slight; Donnelson slight; Mike Holie, slight; Adolph Busser, slight; Cyrus Johnson, slight; Reid, slight; J. A. Leonard, slight; Jack Berryman, slight; Wm. Minner, slight; Mary Smith, fatal; Geo. Miller fatal. A man from Virginia, seriously wounded, refused to give name.

CINCINNATI, March 29.—Midnight.-Such a night of blood as this has not before darkened the history of Cincinnati. It is imened the history of Cincinnati. It is impossible to ascertain the true situation. Men have been killed several squares from the scene of the riot. One man has just been shot on Fountain square, six squares from the court house. The fire at the court house was started by rolling in barrels of coal oil and setting it on fire and keeping everybody out. Lieut. Desmond offered to subdue the flames and was instantly killed. The flames went their own way, because the mob would not let the firemen use their engines. The flames went on the use their engines. The flames went on un-checked, though slowly, as the great struc-ture was strongly built, and cost probably a quarter of a million, and made to withstand fire as far as possible. To lose that means irreparable loss in valuable records, some of them of great historical interest and value, and of the second best library in the United States. A carriage factory near by is also reported on fire, and in the present chaotic reported on fire, and in the present chaotic of affairs there is nothing to prevent untold loss from fire, except lack of material to give it a start. When the mob had robbed Powell's gun store it was fired. A patrol wagon responded to the alarm and the mob fired, killing one man and wounding others. This fire was, however, extinguished. The mob has lost all control and seems bound on destruction, pure and simple. Burning the destruction, pure and simple. Burning the court house gives no aid in the original purpose of lynching the murderers, and its destruction only adds loss to disgrace. The firing on the mob has been merciless, whether by the Gatling gun or by the soidiers, cannot now be told, as nothing has been heard from the inside of the jail for the past hour. No one can yet estimate the loss of life or injury by wounds. MARCH 30.—At daylight this morning an he had on was his best, associated press reporter walked through and all he had, and that to go fishing the quarter of the city where the stormy in it would spoil it. To meet this obscenes of the previous night had been enacted. The dawning was as peaceful and brilliant as ever seen. Against an exquisitely tinted sky in the east the broken walls of the burning conrt house were distinctly defined, with its crumbled window openings looking like rude wounds. Over the ruins of the treasurer's office, in the northern part of the building, the ruddy glow of the fire was still visible, while from other portions thin, white-colored smoke and steam were rising, as the water thrown by the engines fell inth the burning contents. Last night when the sun went down the occupants of the treasurer's office were sitting at the open plate glass windows smoking cigars and reading the accounts of the previous night's attempts on the fail. There was no thought that in six hours those windows would be broken and the accumulated wealth of the contents of that great building in ruins. But this building, great as its loss, was merely property.

Other losses in that locality were of human life. Only pools of blood here and there in the trampled dust or on the brick sidewalks, were to be seen. Only an hour before, on Sycamore street, below Court, lay four or five dead bodies of drunken or venturesome men, who, in spite of the policemen's warning, had gone beyond the limit permitted by the militia. When they fell under the fire of the militia, no one dared to go and take them away until the mob had dispersed and the streets were clear. Only two hours before, at 3 a. m., when a small crowd gathered at the drug store at the corner of Court and Walnut, a square west of the court house, to see the patrol wagon take awas a dead man, the militia, mistaking this for a renewal of the mob, fired a volley, killing one and wounding a nephew of the proprietor of the store. One ball struck the iron facing of the door, and, rebounding, crashed through the glass door near the head of the proprietor, who was using the telephone at the time. Passing from the north side of Court on Walnut a sickening scene was presented. Here, apparently, the wounded had taken shelter behind a protecting building, or perhaps the fatally wounded had crawled to die. Pool after pool of blood dyed the ground along the curbstone. Along the street signs of blood were visible and in a hallway three squares distant on Main street the door squares distant on Main street the floor was smeared where some unfortunate had crawled to dress his wounds or die. The burning of the court house was wholly aimless and malicious, except that one might find excuse in the feeling that the crowd was angered at the place where a failure to do justice had been so marked. It did not aid at all in getting at the prisoners nor doing harm to the militia. It was purely wanton. Nor was there any excuse for a failure to protect this property. The crowd was permitted to go to the very windows and break them without resistance when opportunity offered some devilish communist, who gloried in pure destruction, suggested to cast some light on the subject. This was the trivial manner in which he This was the trivial manner in which he talked: "This will be the Paris of America sure enough." With this leadership and with these motives, chairs, carpets and desks were broken and piled in heaps in the treasurer's office and the match applied. As this was done the silly headed or drunken hoodlums in the crowd cheered and velled, "Burn the d-d militia out."

There was no use in trying to stop the incendiaries. They went from office to office starting fires, and in a few minutes, with the windows all broken out in the side, the court house glowed like a furnace. The fire engines were powerless, first, because the firemen refused to go out without an escort of troops, and, second, because the crowd could easily have cut the hose and prevented the use of engines; so the fire had its way. Office after office was reached by the flames, and as the floors crashed and fell the crowd cheered. Everywhere solemnity prevails. The applling loss of property and frightful destruction of life brings the people to a realization of the awful calamity. If anything could intensify the honest indignation discourse that is for the prevention of infectious discourse the first cause of this cut.

day. The place seemed to be regarded with dread, and at noon, even when the weather was delightfully pleasant, there was not as much travel on the streets in that vicinity as is usual on ordinary Sunday.

LATER.—March 80, 2 a. m.—The police report everybody going home and the city perfectly quiet. Among the men in jail for participating in the riot is "Peggy" Warren, a member of the last legislature of Ohio. He is said to have been among the most active in convention the robbers of the most active in counseling the robbery of the Half of the militia on guard at the jall have been relieved. Since the firing at 8 p. m. no one has been shot. The volleys since that time have been merely blinds to clear the streets. It has been ascertained that since the 8 p. m. firing, no one has been killed, but three persons were wounded, two men, Pfeiser and Cope, and one man whose name was not reported. By order of the secretary of war a detachment of United States regulars will be held in readiness to protect United States property here, if nec-

Anecdote of Webster. Harper's Magazine.

The amusing controversy and correspondence growing out of Secretary Marcy's court dress circular when James Buchanan was minister to the court of St. James, described in an article on Buchanan in the January number of this magazine, reminds a correspondent of an occurrence that took place at Marshfield in Mr. Webster's

Mr. Webster and Jupge Duane Doty, then of Green Bay, Wisconsin, were warm friends, and the judge at one time was a visitor at Marshfield. Mr. Webster was very fond of fishing-the only out-door sport in which he indulged. While the judge was his guest it chanced that a fine day for this sport presented itself of which Mr. W. was anxious to avail himself. He accordingly invited the judge to accompany him in this piscatory sport. The judge didn't want to go, and tried his best to get off, saying he would much prefer, with his consent, to pass that rainy day in Mr W.'s library among his books and papers. Mr. W. wouldn't listen to him, said he could pass any and as many days in the library as he chose, but such a day as that for fishing might not occur again while they were at Marshfield. The judge, as a last resort, said that he really could not go, as he would spoil his clothes, that the handsome black suit jection Mr. W. directed his servant George to go up stairs and bring down the dress in which he was presented at court in England, which George did. As soon as he appeared with it Mr. W. said, "There, Doty, is a dress for you; put it on, and come as soon as you can, for we are losing valuable time."

The judge replied, "Surely, Mr. Webster, you are not in earnest in what you say—that you want me to go fishing in that elegant suit, and spoil

"Yes, I am," he replied; "that is what it has been brought down for." The judge still lingered, when Mr. W., to settte the matter, said to him: "Have no anxiety about injuring the dress, for to fish or hunt in it is the only way it can now be made useful. Could I wear it in Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, or even here? If I did, wouldn't everybody laugh at me?"

The judge was compelled to answer affirmatively to the question. "Well, then," he said, "pray what is it good for but to go fishing in?"

This settled the matter. The judge put on the dress, and went fishing in Mr. W.'s court suit and saved his own. Thus, you see, Mr. Webster, with his well known willingness to oblige, had no objection to appear before England's queen in the dress prescribed; and what a good use he made of it after his return home!

"Bread Upon the Waters."

A few years ago the people of Kan-sas were in great distress from the ravages of the grasshoppers. They were not able to supply themselves with even the necessaries of life, and were obliged to call upon the charitable of other parts of the country for assistance. The needed help was very gladly given, probably with little thought on the part of any of the contributors that the time would ever come when they would appreciate a similar kindness. But the reat floods through the Ohio valley have obliged the people of that section to depend upon the bounty of others, and no more pleasing instance of appreciated kindness is seen than occurred in Kansas a few days ago. The people of Sedgewick county in that state, have opened their rich granaries, state, have opened their rich granaries, and from their abundance loaded thirty ivory-headed gavel. This, in a case of cars of corn for the flood sufferers. These cars were made into a special freight train, gaily decorated, and started on its kind mission. The passage of this train through the country attracted great attention, and calls forcibly to mind the value of the old lisle uses the gavel lightly, but little injunction, to "cast the bread upon the waters."

Action of Cattlemen. The stockmen of McPherson, Kansas, and surrounding country held a mass meeting and passed resolutions endorsing their senators in asking the government to co-operate in stamping out the terrible cat-tle scourge; also endorsing Governor Glick for his promptness in convening the legisla-

Absolute Truth with Collateral Proof From Which There Can Be No Appeal.

For the past three years we have had a standing offer of $5,000 for any state-ment of cure published by us which was not, so far as we know, bona fide. We did this in order that all readers might know the absolute truth of all our assertions and that they were based upon idle words. Below we give a few extracts from recent letters, which speak for themselves. We will only add that we could furnish one hundred thousand more of a similar nature did occasion require, but we believe the entire American public is now convinced of the positive value of Warner's Safe H.
