

THE COWBOY BOLD.

In days just flown, Ere duces were known, When cowboys he'd their sway; A cowboy bold, in buckskin old, Sang merrily this lay: 'My love is young and fair, My love has 'goldine' hair; And figure tall and feet so small That none with her compare, So what care I, though liquor's high? I'll drink her health or die!'

ADVERTISING WITHOUT COST.

The Result, as is Usual in Such Cases, Was Not Satisfactory.

Denver Tribune.

A hardware man lately took the agency for a new kind of ice-box for preserving cold victuals. It was a pretty good thing, he thought, and it was only necessary to enlighten the public regarding its real merits and indisputable advantages over everything else of the kind to cause a tremendous rush of customers eager to purchase; so he counseled with himself and soliloquized thusly:

"That refrigerator must be brought before the people, and I am just the man to do it. Don't talk to me about your newspaper advertisements. I'll show you how to advertise without cost. You don't catch me paying a paper for advertising; not I. I'm too old for that, and I show folks a new idea."

Then he laughed a satisfied laugh, and at once set about making a practical test of his new method of diffusing information. He mixed up a pot of black paint, procured several large sheets of card-board, and after much experimenting and repeated attempts, finally succeeded in producing two signs that read as follows:

"Fifty dollars to the man who can prove that any two things put into this ice-chest will taste one of the other."

He had a refrigerator run out to the curb-stone, hung a sign over each side, and retired indoors to await the expected run of customers. People passed up and down the street, jostled each other in their hurry, glanced at the ice-box and its signs, and went on. After some hours of disappointed hopes and expectations the dealer saw a pedestrian halt, calmly peruse the wonderful announcement, and rather hesitatingly advance to the door.

"Do you mean it?" he inquired in an anxious tone, pointing over his shoulder to the signs.

"Yes-sir-ee," emphatically responded the dealer.

"Put your money up," insinuated the stranger.

"No, sir," replied the dealer, in a pompous style; "my word is as good as the cash."

"All right, I'll take you," responded the stranger, as he departed. Some time after he returned with a box under each arm.

"Stick to your agreement?" he queried.

"Of course I will," answered the dealer, wondering what in the name of Christopher Columbus the man had in view.

The stranger set his boxes down on the sidewalk, and a crowd began to collect. He told the dealer that he was afraid that he (the dealer) would back out of the bargain, but the latter asserted his readiness to put up the stamps if necessary. The stranger opened a box, lifted a cat out and placed her in the refrigerator; then he opened the other box and took therefrom a wire cage containing a large rat.

"Now, mister," said he, "you just shut that door in a hurry when I flop the rat inside, and I'll go you another fifty five one minutes."

The crowd yelled, and the dealer slammed the refrigerator door and slid into the store, with a remark about fools and swindlers. He still refuses to recognize the stranger's claim to the $50—but has taken his sign in.

125 Years Old.

Messrs. Francis Newbery & Son, London, England, established for 125 years, write: As a testimonial from one of the oldest drug-houses in Great Britain, respecting your household remedy, will no doubt be of interest to you, we are pleased to make the statement that we have sold St. Jacobs Oil with satisfaction to the public, for several years, and that owing to the extraordinary merits of the article, the demand is continually increasing, and that we have heard of many favorable reports regarding its great virtue as a pain-curing remedy.

Going Home.

Chicago Herald.

"Yes, sir, I'm going home to see my folks down in New York," said a young man as best he could between his frequent spells of painful coughing. His face was thin and each of his cheeks dotted with a small pink spot; his eyes were bright but sunken, his hands limp and fleshless, his voice hollow and his breath short. "I've been out west a couple of years, sir; went out for my health, which was poor. I got better, a good deal better, and went to work. Think I must have worked too hard, as I was anxious to get enough money ahead to build a nice house for somebody back in New York. Anyhow, I got sick again, and concluded

GETTING TO THE FRONT.

Boston Directors of the Union Pacific Moving West on the Double-Quick.

A Chicago dispatch of the 28th says: Mr. Dexter, one of the Boston directors of the Union Pacific, arrived here yesterday rather unexpectedly, on his way to Omaha, he left on the noon train taking S. R. Callaway with him. It is stated that other eastern directors will come west next week on the same errand. The cause for this new investigation, just after President Adams and F. L. Ames have examined the company's affairs has not transpired. It is quite evident that something new has turned up and that some decisive action is soon to be taken by the directors. It is claimed by some that the intention is to have the road placed in the hands of a receiver, and that personally examine the affairs of the company and see if such action is actually necessary. There are some, however, who claim to be posted in Union Pacific affairs, who insist the road cannot be placed in the hands of a receiver so long as it can pay its debts. It is stated that the road is in a state of financial independence, and there are no indications that default had to be made.

Shocking Suffering.

"Dear me," gasped Mrs. Knowl, "here is a terrible item in the paper. My, how the poor man must have suffered!" "What is it?" asked her husband, coming to her side. "Why, one of those poor walking-match fellows swallowed a sponge!" "What? Let me see." After carefully reading the article Mr. K. threw the paper down, growling: "You women ain't got a grain of sense; it don't say he swallowed a sponge." "I know it don't in those exact words," answered his wife; then brightly continued: "But how could he throw up the sponge if he didn't swallow it?"

Another Life Saved.

About two years ago, a prominent citizen of Chicago was told by his physicians that he must die. They said his system was so debilitated that there was nothing left to build on. He made up his mind to try a "new departure."

He got some of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and took it according to directions. He began to improve at once. He kept up the treatment for some months, and is to-day a well man. He says the "Discovery" saved his life.

How refreshing it is to the city man to walk through the green fields of the country when they are adorned with thousands of wild but beautiful flowers, and how it arouses his sluggish energy and sends the blood coursing through his veins when he carelessly kicks over a wasp's nest and has to run for dear life.—Philadelphia Chronicle.

The Century will commence in the August number a series of three papers by Mr. W. J. Stillman, recording the experiences of a classical expedition undertaken for the magazine. His object was to trace the wanderings of Ulysses, as described in Homer's "Odyssey," and to identify, as far as it is possible to-day, the localities visited by the Ithacan king. The articles will have archaeological value, as well as special interest for modern travelers.

GLADSTONE'S ASTUTENESS.

Concessions to France, but English Opinion D. fended.

A cable from London of the 28th states that a complete change has come over Gladstone's mind since Monday. The ministry, which last week was believed in imminent danger, and in hesitation whether to dissolve or resign, emerges triumphant for the moment from amid the most pressing peril. The Egyptian crisis, though not over, postponed, Gladstone's mind has been torn by a permanent party, he made his worst mistake abroad but saved him at home. His agreement with France, as described by himself, proves to embody nearly every concession to French susceptibilities, and every defense of English opinion which had been foretold. It is his astuteness in separating the two halves of his policy which gives the premier his present triumphs.
