WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, March 15, 1885.

I doubt whether Washington society will be able to survive one of Mr.
Cleveland's innovations upon the customs of the Capital, which is the getting up in the morning, eating breakfast, and at work by 9 o'clock.
The White House has known no such plebian way of doing things in the last half century. Arthur did his executive work by the midnight oil, and his sleeping through the first half of the day. He was rarely to be seen before twelve o'clock, and of course was inaccessible to those Congressmen who make their daily rounds of the departments, before the meeting of Congress at noon. It was the example set by the occupants of the White House in times past, that has made all Washington go to bed in the morning and get up at midday. So that the eight o'clock breakfast that President Cleveland has regularly taken since entering upon the official duties, has set us all so badly by the ears that the President must be imported to fall in with the established precedent and take his breakfast in bed.

The House performed a very commendable piece of work in its last hours by putting General Grant on the retired list, where he will pretty certain to be placed beyond the reach of immediate want, if he will only keep his family and himself aloof from the financial sharks of Wall street. The pay and the perquisites of a retired General of this rank, amounts to about nineteen thousand dollars per year, which surely ought to be enough to keep a private family in a comfortable situation even in New York City. The present precarious condition of General Grant's health has aroused sympathy for him and his family throughout the country, and at the adjournment of Congress last Wednesday more than half a million of people had forwarded to Congress their appeals to that body to enact the retirement bill.

John Quincy Adams became a member of the lower house of Congress after having served a term as President of the United States, because, as he declared, the one position was equal in every way to the other. Now, however, we have Congressmen and reverend Senators who are not only willing but anxious to serve their country in any possible or impossible capacity, so long as they can have their names retained upon the Government pay roll. To day some of the ex-members of the recently expired Congress are applicants for menial positions in the next Congress, just as the ex-members of a previous Congress have accepted service in this. Fifty of these members have got to be provided for, though why a defeated candidate for re-election should not suffer the consequences of his own unpopularity is unfathomable.

In the admirable closing address of Speaker Carlisle, he paid his particular respects to the modern Congressmen who deem it his peculiar mission to draft bills and introduce them. The Speaker said that from the organization of the Government to the close of the Twenty-Fifth Congress, a period of fifty years, there had been but eight thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven bills introduced, while in the present Congress alone there had been eight thousand six hundred and thirty! If this practice does not require some constitutional or other treatment, I know of no governmental abuse that does. Hardly a single appropriation bill in the general class nowadays, is not a draft upon the Treasury for more money than the appropriations of ten years would cover fifty years ago, when the net expenditures for running the Government annually did not amount to as much as is now required to build an ordinary public building in New York, Chicago or San Francisco. DOM PEDRO.

EDWARD P. CLARK, who has been nominated as assistant secretary of the interior, is a personal friend of Mr.
Lamar's. He is a man in the neighborhood of forty-five years of age, is a well educated lawyer and a man in whom Mr. Lamar has every confidence. He hails from Vicksburg, served in the confederate army as a colonel, and has never held a public position of importance.

A church in New York has set apart a large room in the basement for a skating rink and the proceeds go to help pay the salary of the pastor.
A rival clergyman has mentioned it in his sermon and calls it the "church of the Holy Rink."
